Ship Matter Settled?
Lenin Succeeded
One Lord's Good Work
Civilization Comes Hard

—By Arthur Brisbane—

There will probably be an agreement on the size of navies, England and the United States to be equal, Japan sixty per cent. of the English and American battleship power. If the English-Japanese alliance stands, that alliance would have sixteen naval fighting units to ten for the United States.

Beatty, who speaks for England, says if Japan insists on more ships than her allotment other countries will have to have more. England apparently trusts Japan, "but doesn't believe in fooling with her."

Mr. Lenin, taking charge of Russia with the idea that the only thing was labor, and that capital didn't count, announced that he would make money ridiculous. So far as Russia is concerned, he seems to have succeeded. Yesterday one million rubles, worth $500,000 in the old days, sold for $5. That is making money as ridiculous as you can well wish to have it.

Lord Mount Stephen is dead, ninety-two years old. In that man's career is hope for a settlement of questions that affect the world. Eighty years ago plain George Stephen, a little boy in the highlands of Scotland, was looking after sheep and cows for a living.

After he found work in a dry good department store. Lucky thing for him, for such stores give business education to their employes.

Later he was a pioneer railroad builder in Canada and first president of the Canadian Pacific road.

A builder of railroads is a builder of civilization. He brings men together, frees them from slavery by making machines do the work.

At this moment the American Locomotive Company of the United States is building forty-seven locomotives for China. These locomotives will do more for civilization than many conferences and discussions.

Last night an Associated Press dispatch predicted that the Irish arrangement "would break down almost immediately."

Troubles between the North and South of Ireland, partly religious, partly racial, partly industrial, are to blame.

If in one small island in the heart of civilization, two small groups of human beings not far apart in race and with a high average of intelligence, find it impossible to get along peacefully, what can you expect to do with China and Japan, Turkey and Armenia, Mesopotamia and Tnibet?

Isn't it clear that the problem of civilization is not temporary disarmament, but the problem of breeding a different race of human beings—which will take thousands of years.

Meanwhile those that have made some progress and that want peace will do well TO BE PREPARED.

You read when a little boy about the galleons, going from Spain to South America, bringing back bricks of gold and silver. You read of the bold British tars seizing, robbing and sinking the galleons. Now you read something different. Spain has built to carry sixty passengers in ninety hours from Cadiz to the Argentine republic gigantic dirigible fliers.

Seven thousand miles' flight in ninety hours is a big change from ancient galleons spending months on the same trip, blown by the winds and watching for pirates.

General Wood and W. C. Forbes, former Governor-General, unite in recommending that the United States hold onto the Philippines. The Filipinos will thank them for the advice, if they are wise.

If huge China with her four hundred million population comes weeping to Washington for protection against the Japanese, what would happen to the Philippines if this country let go of them? They do us no particular good. We protect them.

Three gentlemen in Chicago formed an "egg pool," bought eggs for twenty cents a dozen, now sell them for fifty cents. Thanks to cold storage.

Housewives are advised to boycott eggs, which would mean doing without. More intelligent advice would be for the government to boycott egg pools and make the boycott effective with the help of a few reliable jailers.

Lloyd George, who financed England and helped finance other European countries through the war, is said to have taken hold of the German financial situation, a sore spot in the world's money.

If Lloyd George goes into it, something will be done. When he started handling England's finances the rich and ignorant men of England declared that he would ruin everything, and they would take their capital to the continent.

If they had done that they would now have money worth about one cent on a dollar. Luckily for them they didn't. Lloyd George made of England's money the only really good money outside of the United States, when the war ended.

FIRES SHOT IN HEAD AND IS DYING

Disappeared From Home in Chelsea and Police Were Asked to Find Her

Mrs. Elizabeth Keezer, fifty years old, of No. 37 Marginal street, Chelsea, shot and killed her twelve-year-old son, Eldon, and then fired a bullet into her own head, in room 393, in the Adams House on Washington street today.

She was taken to the City Hospital and is not expected to recover. Police have not as yet ascertained the motive.

Mrs. Keezer is the wife of George E. Keezer, a lighthouse keeper, it is stated.

Mrs. Keezer registered herself and her son as guests at the Adams House last night.

Police understand that the woman disappeared from home yesterday, and that her husband had asked the Chelsea police to search for her.

2 CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH IN ROOM

Investigation of Suspicious Fire in New Bedford Started by State Officials

New Bedford, Dec. 1.—Two children were burned to death today while their father, struggling to go to their rescue, was forced to look on and see their bodies consumed by the flames that had turned their little cottage into a raging furnace.

Held by police, he was forcibly prevented from racing into the flames and certain death.

The fire was at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lytle of Phillips road, and the blaze was started from the outside. State fire officials were summoned and a rigid investigation is under way.

SAVES THREE CHILDREN.

Roused from his sleep by the flames, Lytle dashed throuh the smoke to the room where were sleeping nine-year-old Doris and four-year-old Fred. Grabbing them, he darted down the stairs and stumbled through the outside door, almost overcome.

He dashed back again into the burning house and up the stairs, this time seizing ten-year-old Ethel. Reaching the stairs, he gave her a push and she fell to the bottom, succeeding in escaping safety from there.

Again going into the room to get the two remaining children, he was almost overcome when the blazing beams from above rained upon him, and he was dragged from the blazing building just in time.

On the ground he found his wife, Nellie, who had jumped from a second story window. Neighbors cared for her until she could be taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

The tragic news of the death of her other two children was kept from her.

"Where are the other two kiddies?" shouted Lytle as he struggled to get back into the house.

Then, with a shriek, he shouted: "There they are!"

A glance into the flames, and the Doukhobors in Undress Parade as U. S. Bars Them

By Associated Press.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 1.—Three Doukhobors, or Russian Non-Conformists, from near Nelson, B. C., discarded all their clothing in a waiting room at the Canadian Pacific Railway station here and paced off a protesting war dance when they were refused admittance to the United States. They were arrested for disorderly conduct.

United States Immigration Commissioner Zurbrick had questioned them as to their fitness to proceed on their journey to the State of Washington as prospective settlers. He found they believed in "philosophical anarchy."

They are said to have threatened an undress parade in Vancouver in protest against their arrest.

BOY, 10, CROSSES OCEAN ALONE 3 TIMES

Tommy Wilson Is Bored Because Passengers Pay Attention to His Exploits

Thomas Holmes Wilson, a veteran trans-Atlantic voyager, reached Boston today on the Leyland liner Winifredian from Liverpool.

Young Mr. Wilson, who is ten, was completing his third trip across the ocean alone. He was a bit bored by the attention the ninety-six passengers paid him. He preferred that they pet the liner's two other lone voyagers, Hilda and Mary Brent, aged eight and six, who were novices on the high seas. It was an old story to T. H. W.

Young Mr. Wilson's mother is dead and his father is an invalid. He crossed to visit his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson of Worcester.

The Brent girls came from England to join their mother, who lives in Newton. They had some dozen volunteer mothers among the passengers during the trip over.

Five pretty Lancaster girls arrived to seek work in the Fall River mills. They were Rose, Ethel, Elizabeth, Annie and Kathleen Brady.

Miriam Zelcozitch was greeted at the dock by her fiance, Elihon Knight, of No. 3 Mascot street, Dorchester. They were sweethearts in Manchester, Eng. Knight came here some time ago and is now established in business.

The Winifredian missed the storms through which liners arriving earlier in the week passed. She brought a large cargo.

BRIBERY IS CHARGED TO TUFTS

Middlesex Association, In Disbarment Petition, Attacks Deposed District Attorney

Revealing new and sensational charges against Nathan A. Tufts of Winchester, deposed District Attorney of Middlesex County, the Grievance Committee of the Middlesex County Bar Association today filed a petition in Superior Court demanding his disbarment.

The petition contained the first direct accusation that Tufts had accepted large sums of money extorted from divers persons under threat of criminal prosecution.

It also contained the new charge that Tufts testified falsely during his trial before the Massachusetts Supreme Court, which trial ended in his removal from office.

The grievance committee of the Middlesex Bar Association, in its petition, bitterly inveighed against Tufts and concluded a particularly virulent attack on him by accusing him of "deceit malpractice and other gross misconduct," and by referring to him as "a man not of good moral character."

CHARGE BRIBERY

Many of the charges in the disbarment proceeding instituted today are the same which figured in the removal trial before the Supreme Court last Summer—the Mishawum Manor case, the Stearns divorce case, the "Poco" Bennett case, the International Service Company case and many others.

But, in several of these instances, where Tufts was formerly charged with aiding and abetting others to extort money, he was today flatly accused of "having converted large sums of the money so extorted to his own use."

The new charge that Tufts, fighting to escape removal, testified falsely before the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth, was a surprise to even

EXTENSION GRANTED SACCO AND VANZETTI

Judge Webster Thayer in the Superior Court at Dedham, today extended until December 20 the time allowed counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to file a petition based on exceptions taken by them during the trial in which the men were found guilty of murder in the first degree for the killing of a paymaster and his guard at South Braintree. The time limit originally set expired today. District Attorney Frederick G. Katzman agreed to the motion for an extension which defence counsel explained was made in order to allow them further time to prepare and file the necessary papers. Decision of Judge Thayer in a motion for a new trial is still pending. Meantime sentence of the convicted men has been deferred.

Miss Butler Says Hair and Sneakers Aided in Her Identification of One

New Bedford, Dec. 1.—Weeping and hesitating, Gertrude Butler, whose story of an attack by three Bravas in Bourndale last Sufmer led to the threats to lynch John Dies, Joseph Andrews and Benjamin Gomes, today at their trial in the Bristol County Superior Court, admitted that—

She identified Gomes only by his voice as he pleaded "Not guilty," by his hair and a pair of soiled white sneakers.

William Eldredge left her at her door at 4:30 in the morning after the alleged attack and did not accompany her inside.

She did not tell her father or mother of the night's happenings until the next morning.

She did not want the police called in on the case.

Silk Is So High That Girls Just Won't Follow Style

By International News Service.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Are the dainty and delicately tinted silk feminine adornments being cast aside by the women folk?

The Federal Reserve Board is all wrought up about it.

The board, entirely of masculine persuasion, and usually cautious of speech, burst forth with alarm today over a sharp reduction in the silk business.

"Half of the silk manufacturers report that business is poor and demand decreasing," the board said.

"There's only one answer to that," said a wiseacre at the board. "Ask the women, they know. Why ask the men? They don't wear 'em."

Serious comment by the board on reasons for the stoppage of activity in the silk mills showed that women were really balking at continued high prices for the filmy garments.

Mrs. Hasper said her husband had first shot her and then turned the revolver on himself.

WILL KNOW FATE IN 48 HOURS

By International News Service

San Francisco, Dec 1.—With the close of the trial of Roscoe C. "Fatty" Arbuckle approaching, speculation as to its cost increased. The cost to the State was figured somewhere between $4,000 and $7,000. The cost of housing, entertaining and dining the jury was placed near $3,000.

A special fund of $1,000 was allowed District Attorney Brady for investigation. The State brought one witness from Chicago and many from Los Angeles.

What has it cost "Fatty"?

Probably even he does not know yet. Rumors place Gavin McNab's fee as high as $100,000. Then there are Charles H. Brennan and Milton Cohen, Nat Schmulowitz and Joseph McInerney. Schmulowitz and McInerney are McNab's personal associates and their services are understood to be covered by their chief's fee.

Brennan is reported to have been promised $10,000. Cohen is Arbuckle's personal attorney. Perhaps it is all in the year's work for him—and perhaps not.

Frank Dominguez, Arbuckle's first attorney, is said to have received $20,000 for one week's work at the preliminary trial. Then there have been witnesses, medical experts and odds and ends. Statistical sharks add these and get a sum in excess of $150,000.

Arbuckle' last forty-eight hours of suspense were at hand with the convening of court today.

The State, seeking to fix upon him the charge of manslaughter, planned to call a few more witnesses. But their testimony pertained only to minor issues.

The last important issue of the case was to be decided in the report of three physicians who at the direction of the court made a microscopic examination of one of Virginia Rappe's internal organs.

The State has contended that the girl was in perfect health. The defence has urged that from her early youth she suffered from a chronic affection which might have made possible her death from natural causes.

Science was to decide this issue today.

Arguments starting this afternoon were expected to be completed tomorrow afternoon.

Following Judge Louderback's charge, the case will go to the jury and a verdict by Friday evening is anticipated.

Assistant District Attorney Fried man was to open the arguments for the State. Gavin McNab chief counsel for Arbuckle, was to follow. Then Assistant District Attorney Milton [illegible] Ren was to sum up for the State. McNab was to do all the talking for the defence.

Despite his brilliant array of assistants, the veteran attorney has shifted few of the responsibilities of the case and he purposes carrying this through to the end.

The bodies of the two children who were burned to death were still in the ruins today, only a few charred bones remaining.

INSISTENT CRY TO PRESERVE IRISH TRUCE

London, Dec. 1—(By Associated Press).—Preservation of the truce in Ireland, whatever may happen to the peace negotiations, is being urged today by a considerable section of the British press.

It is suggested that this be achieved through adjournment of the conference to a fixed date a month or six weeks hence.

The Sinn Fein publicity department reiterated this forenoon that it expected further meetings between the government and the Sinn Fein delegates, and it is believed arrangements regarding the truce will be considered at the next meeting.

The original truce terms provided no plans for its cessation, and it is felt, it is said, that even if it develops that hostilities must be renewed provision should be made fixing a definite date for abandonment of the pact instead of letting the truce break down without notice, which has been considered in many quarters the probable outcome.

The possibility of renewed bloodshed faces the British Isles in consequence of the virtual collapse of the peace negotiations.

The Sinn Fein has stood on its demand for an all-Ireland Parliament as the basis of settlement, at the same time refusing to concede allegiance to the British crown. Ulster has refused point-blank to scrap her own Parliament to enter an all-Ireland Parliament "under present conditions," on the ground that she would thereby come directly under the control of the numerically superior south.

The latest plan, that for an all-Ireland Parliament under which Ulster could retain her existing rights, or unless she changed her mind, has failed with the formal statement by the Sinn Fein delegation here that it cannot be considered.

As a result, in both government and Irish circles the opinion is expressed that nothing short of a miracle can avert complete collapse of the negotiations and resumption of the warfare in Ireland.

GIRL TELLS HOW SHE PICKED OUT BRAVAS

story, Jourdain led her through the events leading to the alleged attack, until she fainted, when he asked her three times what happened in an automobile.

Miss Butler said Gomes wore a pair of soiled white sneakers. She admitted that most of the Bravas on the Cape wore sneakers, and that most of them had hair of the same color and texture as Gomes.

"What did you hear Gomes says, when you identified him?" asked Jourdain.

"Not guilty," she said.

"Was Gomes alone or with others when you picked him out?"

"He was alone."

"Have you a liking for colored people?" asked Jordain.

"No," she said.

ADMITS PREJUDICE.

"Were you prejudiced against these men on account of their color?"

"Yes."

Then, raising his voice and looking directly at the girl in the witness chair, Jourdain asked:

"You would not care if they suffered, even if they were innocent?

A low "Yes, I would," and the girl fainted for the third time today.

The girl admitted that she identified the automobile that she said the Bravas used, from a window in the Barnstable County courtroom fifteen feet away, and that there were no other cars of a similar make in the vicinity.

After the girl had fainted for the third time and had been revived, William H. Lewis, chief of counsel for the defence, took the floor and began his cross-examination.

CHEERFUL IN MORNING.

Miss Butler was smiling and cheerful as she entered the courtroom this morning, in marked contrast to yesterday, when she collapsed seven times.

But, as little by little, Edwin B. Jourdain, of counsel for the defence, drew from her the story of the events of that day, she grew more and more reticent and collapsed in the easy chair that has been brought into court for her.

For the first time since the trial began, Mrs. Ida Butler, her mother, was not in court, and there were no women present to aid the witness.

The limp form of the girl was picked up by court attaches and carried from the room.

Spectators were surprised when the girl appeared today, apparently in good condition. After she fainted for the seventh time yesterday Dr. Raoul Provost, expert on mental diseases, had declared that it was highly improbable that she could resume the stand.

CROWD COMES BACK.

There were few spectators outside the court and there were few in the room. With the girl off the stand interest waned. However, as it become noised about the city that she had returned and had resumed the witness stand, the crowd began to gather.

As she seated herself in the easy chair, Attorney Jourdain took up the cross-examination where he had left it yesterday. In a quiet, conversational manner he brought from the girl the story of how she had been stopped, with her escort, William Eldredge, taken into an auto, and her escort taken away from the car.

FAILS TO ANSWER.

She said that a man she believed was Dies had ordered Eldredge out of the car.

"Go on," said Jourdain.

The girl hesitated.

"What did Dies do?" asked Jourdain.

"He told me what I could do."

"What was it?"

Again no answer.

Three times the attorney for the Bravas repeated the question, and the third time the girl fainted for the first time today."

HEARST PARTY IS WELCOMED TO OTTAWA

Sir James Lougheed, Acting Prime Minister, Extends Official Greeting

By International News Service.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 1.—The delegation of forty-seven American Congressmen visiting Canada as the guests of William R. Hearst to study the Dominion sales tax were officially welcomed by Sir James Lougheed, acting Prime Minister, at the Parliament building.

"Your visit is wonderful and significant," Sir James said to the Congressmen, after shaking their hands cordially.

"We are more than pleased that you have come so far to study the operation of our sales tax act. We are delighted to place at your disposal the workings of our law and hope you will return to the United States fully informed about it."

Sir James introduced R. R. Breadner, commissioner of taxation, to the delegates. Breadner, who is known as the "father of the sales tax," explained the workings of the tax from its inception.

The welcome of the acting prime minister followed a banquet tendered by the Ottawa Board of Trade at the Chateau Laurier Hotel where officers of the Board expressed their pleasure at the visit of the Americans.

Mayor Frank H. Plant conferred the freedom of the city on the visitors.

Cordial and informative addresses were made at the banquet by Mayor Plant, Godfrey B. Greene, president of the Ottawa Board of Trade, and representatives of Sir James A. Lougheed, acting Prime Minister, and Henry Drayton, Canadian Minister of Finance.

Mayor Plant, young, vigorous, clean-cut, the sort of man one likes to see in political life, shook hands with each member of the party, saying:

"Gentlemen, Ottawa is delighted that you have decided to visit us. I am overjoyed to have this opportunity of greeting so distinguished a body of the American lower house.

"I wish to extend to you the freedom of the city. I know that your visit to Ottawa will be pleasant and profitable to us and trust it will prove so to you."

Indications are plentiful that the purpose of Mr. Hearst's unique project have taken hold not alone on the authorities, but the people of the Dominion. In Montreal the visitors were taken in sleighs to the top of Mount Royal to view the wondrous panorama of snow-clad Montreal.

On the way there they were recognized and greeted by hundreds of citizens of the thriving city of St. Lawrence. On the streets, too, each man who wore on his coat the red, white and blue ribbon of the Sales Tax delegation was given many a friendly handshake.

Today in Parliament buildings the actual workings of the Sales Tax will be explained in detail by distinguished Canadian officials. One of these, the Hon. R. W. Breadner, commissioner of taxes, is known as the "Father of the Sales Tax."

Canadian Sales Tax Head Explains Plan to Guests

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 1.—The Canadian Government has recognized the importance of the Hearst Sales Tax trip by attaching to the party, Major Hobart, chief administrator of the Sales Tax.

On the trip of the Congressmen to Ottawa, Major Hobart talked informally about Canada's great "painless tax which yielded $5[illegible] of revenue last year and is expected to yield over $100,000,000 this year.

Points emphasized by the major were:

Canada places a tax on every sale by manufacturer or producer or wholesaler (with large and liberal list of exemptions for the producers).

Each month the government is paid taxes for the previous month.

There are not more than two tax turnovers and enforcement is simple, because wholesalers and retailers have written statements of taxes due the government by the other.

MONTHLY COLLECTIONS.

Total cost of administering the law is not more than 1 per cent.

Major Hobart said:

"The Canadian law provides roughly for a 3 per cent. tax on sales by manufacturer, wholesaler and jobber. Of course, the consumer pays the tax eventually, but he does not know it. Except in rare cases the ultimate consumer never is taxed because the tax is collected before it reaches him.

"Every article turned out by a manufacturer carries a separate item, the tax amount of say 1½ per cent. to be collected by the wholesaler. In the same manner the wholsaler collects 1½ per cent. from the retailer. So both wholesaler and retailer know directly what they have to pay and as collections are made monthly neither has an opportunity to use money that is due the government.

NO FRAUD.

"My force consists of but forty men. We use various government offices throughout the country, so the cost of collection is almost nil.

"We use the 150 so-called superior tax offices in the country, and in very small places the customs officer collects the tax and turns it over to the nearest superior tax office.

"Because of our simple method of checking up, there is no fraud. We know instantly what tax is due from manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers, etc., and we know what every producer in the country is doing.

"Take a $5 pair of shoes. The manufacturer pays 1½ per cent.; that is seven and a half cents. The wholesaler or retailer pays a similar amount. The amounts are so small that often the tax charge is absorbed in the actual cost of goods to the wholesaler or retail purchaser."

TUFTS ACCUSED OF TAKING BRIBES

Middlesex Bar Association In Bitter Attack on Deposed District Attorney

those who have been following his case.

This and the other allegations all indicate long and careful investigation by the grievance committee sub-committee, which was headed by Attorney Gilbert A. A. Pevey. Other members of this investigating committee were former Mayor Augustine J. Daly of Cambridge, Judge Prescott Keyes of Concord, Judge Henry C. Mulligan of Natick, and Frederick N. Wier of Lowell, a former district attorney of Middlesex County.

MISHAWUM CASE.

The grievance committee charges that Tufts testified falsely in the Mishawum Manor case at his previous trial but does not specify further.

It charges that Tufts conspired with Daniel H. Coakley and others to extort thousands of dollars from guests at the famous Mishawum Manor "Nero Circus" and that he aided Coakley by threats of criminal prosecution, made against the guests.

Other allegations, in brief, are as follows:

That Tufts "intelligently and deliberately lied" in a statement given to the press following Herman L. Barney's surrender to him after Barney had escaped from State Prison; and that in so lying he revealed "lamentable want of appreciation of moral values."

That Tufts falsely registered the name of Edward P. O'Halloran of the Newton police on a hotel register in Greenfield while he was "stalling" Barney.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

That Tufts was guilty of dereliction of duty in nol prossing the case against "Sir" Thomas "[illegible]" impostor, who was charged with lar[illegible] Gordon.

That Tufts conspired with Harry E. Levenson and others to extort money from the International Service Company, Inc., under threat of criminal prosecution, and that Tufts "in said extortion he fraudulently and unlawfully received for his own use and benefit large sums of money."

That Tufts was guilty of deceit, malpractice and gross misconduct in the International Service Company case.

That Tufts was guilty of misconduct in failing for fifteen months to prosecute James Hart, charged with receiving a stolen automobile, and that the District Attorney's motives were improper.

FAILED TO PROSECUTE.

That Tufts was guilty of misconduct in the Louis (Poco) Bennett case, in which Bennett charged that the Corcoran brothers at the East Cambridge jail offered to use their influence to get him out of jail; and in which the State charges Tufts did not try to prosecute the Corcorans properly.

Beside these specific charges the grievance committee makes the following spectacular allegations, of a general nature:

"That said Tufts was guilty of malpractice, deceit and gross misconduct in that he, the said Tufts, being at that time District Attorney, did extort or aid and abet in extorting large sums of money from divers persons by threats of criminal prosecution and did convert to his own use the moneys so extorted.

"That said Tufts was guilty of deceit, malpractice and gross misconduct in that he did threaten to accuse divers persons of crime with intent to extort from said persons large amounts of money or property.

GREENFIELD, WIFE'S FIRST HUSBAND, IS 'CRAZY,' COOK ASSERTS

QUESTIONS PRESENCE IN HUB

Professor Eric Greenfield, learned educator, may call Walter S. Cook, learned archeological student, all the "social climbers" he wants to.

Walter Cook will merely answer back that Professor Greenfield is "crazy."

Obviously there is a difference of learned opinion. Now Professor Greenfield is the first husband of Mrs. Harriet G. Buck Cook of No. 179 Brattle street, Cambridge, who recently had her husband arrested on a charge of trespass into her Brattle street home.

As one of the results of this little mixup in circles educational, Professor Greenfield wrote the Boston American, hotly denying, for Mrs. Cook, that he, her first, divorced husband, and she, were unduly intimate. This charge had been made by second husband Cook.

"Cook is a social climber, whose true colors are shown when he attacks the pure woman who is his wife," writes Greenfield, to the Boston American.

"Professor Greenfield is crazy when he calls me a social climber," says Cook. "Professor Greenfield cannot bear that another man should come into the life of his first wife. He has threatened me that he would write to Boston papers all these charges about me, and now he has done it. I forbear to characterize such conduct. All I can say is that his words speak for his character. But that letter was never written from Purdue University. It was written in the office of Mrs. Cook's lawyer, Jesse D. Crook. Professor Greenfield has been about Boston during this last week. He wrote this letter about me in the office of his wife's lawyer.

"Then they sent it West, had it mailed East to give it the stamp of utter disinterestedness."

HAS COPY OF DECREE.

Plainly Husband Number Two—the ousted, the trespasser, has his doubts of Husband Number One, the Defender of Ladies. As Mr. Cook further explained.

"I think it is highly suspicious that Professor Greenfield should be about Boston just these last few days, when, in his letter, he so plainly explains that he comes East only once, in the Summer. I think the defence which a man who was divorced from his wife on grounds of 'adultery with common prostitutes,' offers, for this same wife, is to be taken with a pinch of salt.

"Mrs. Cook divorced Professor Greenfield for 'adultery with common prostitutes.' I have a copy of the decree, which I shall offer in court. Therefore, in my opinion, when a man, convicted of such an offence, charges me with being a social climber, a money borrower, and such, the charge is to be taken from whence it comes. In other words, Professor Greenfield is crazy or he would not mix up in what concerns him not. He might surmise that such letters would result in having his presence in the East divulged."

The letter to which Cook refers, was sent to the Boston American by Professor Greenfield, in defence of his former wife, against certain charges made by Cook, and published in Boston papers at the time of the archeological student's arrest for trespass. Greenfield's letter follows:

"Inasmuch as I was Mrs. Cook's first husband, having been married to her in 1907 and divorced by her in 1918, and inasmuch as I have known Mr. Cook since 1906, I am in a position to state some facts that were not brought out in the articles printed on this case.

UPHOLDS FORMER WIFE.

"Mr. Cook and his wife are cousins. Before our marriage in 1907 Miss Buck, as she then was, visited relatives in Exeter, where Cook was then attending school. When Mr. Cook insinuates that his wife and cousin, and as pure a woman as ever lived, has committed indiscretions with me he shows himself the cringing social parasite that he is, devoid of self-respect.

"While I was a post-graduate student at Harvard the year after I married Miss Buck, Mr. Cook was a constant visitor at our home. While Mrs. Greenfield and I were visiting in London in the Summer of 1908, Cook visited us repeatedly and borrowed money from Mrs. Greenfield. Mr. Cook visited Mrs. Greenfield frequently before she divorced me in 1918.

"At the time of their marriage she paid debts that he had contracted. Since their marriage Cook has earned practically nothing and Mrs. Cook has footed the bills.

"Mr. Walter Spencer Cook, ever since I first met him, has impressed me as being a social climber. He has repeatedly told me of the wealthy families in which he had the entree and whose members he knew intimately. From what he said I expected he would marry into one of the richest of the Boston or New York families. Instead he married his cousin.

TELLS OF INVITATION.

"Mr. Cook has accused me of 'hanging around' his home, which is the base statement of a false friend. Mrs. Cook is the mother of my only child, of whom she has the custody by court decree. Since [illegible] I have been a teacher at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., where we are given but two vacations a year, one at Christmas and the other in the Summer.

"At Christmas time I have never visited the Cooks more than three afternoons. Each of the four last Summers I have spent at least seven weeks in Northern Vermont.

"I have yielded to the impulse of a father to see his child very, very few times and then only because I have Mr. Cook's own written invitation to 'come at any time.'"

GIRL HIT IN EYE BY GOLF BALL GETS $5,000

Jury at Dedham Brings in Verdict Against Civil Service Commissioner Dana

For injuries sustained when a flying golf ball struck her in an eye, Miss Marion Cox was today awarded a $5,000 verdict against Civil Service Commissioner Payson Dana of Brookline by a jury in the civil session of Superior Court at Dedham.

Miss Cox, who is secretary of the Oxford Paper Company of New York, had sued for $25,000.

According to physicians whose testimony featured in the trial, the young woman's face was marked and her eyesight impaired, but she was not blinded.

Miss Cox was injured in September of last year, while she was walking along a public highway past a golf course on which Dana, the Civil Service Commissioner, was playing.

A hard drive sent the ball out of the grounds and into the face of the startled young woman, she said. She maintained that she had suffered both physical pain and partial disability as a result.

MRS. BIRD TELLS WHY SHE SHOT SUITOR

Brockton Wife Says Revolver Went Off During Struggle With A. C. Bates

Brockton, Dec. 1.—"I didn't mean to shoot him; we struggled for the revolver, and he was shot in the abdomen. Then I must have lost my balance and fired several more shots at him."

Mrs. Frances Bird, of No. 557 Ash street, thus explained how she rained shots on Arthur C. Bates as they were about to elope.

Mrs. Bird, scarcely twenty-three years old and the mother of two children, was visibly upset by the testimony of her erstwhile sweetheart in District Court here, all tending to blame her for the shooting.

Judge Thorndike found probable cause against Mrs. Bird and ordered her held in $3,000 bail for the grand jury on the charge of shooting with intent to murder Bates on October 29 last.

Mrs. Bird sat with her eyes riveted on Bates as he unravelled their courtship of four or five years, which culminated in the shooting. No witnesses for the defence were offered, but when Judge Thorndike pronounced his verdict, the attractive blonde wife, burst into tears and said she wanted

"I have known Bates for four or five years," said Mrs. Bird. "We often went to amusement places together. My husband did not know that we were going together until two years ago. I could not resist Arthur. He bought me chocolates and always showed me a good time. I did not realize I was doing anything wrong.

SEES THE LIGHT.

"Now, I see it all. I have been misled by him. Kip was right when he warned me not to go with Arthur." "Kip" is Clifton E. Bird, the young woman's husband.

"Kip told the police about Bates coming to our house," she resumed. "The police told him not to see me any more. But he continued to come. And my husband often threatened Bates if he persisted in coming. Yes, they came to blows several times.

"All the while I seemed not to realize the danger of the situation. Arthur kept begging me to elope with him. I yielded, because I thought him true. Now my love has turned to hate after the lies he told the court.

NO THOUGHT OF MURDER.

"I had not the slightest intention of murdering him. I brought the revolver and bullets along at Arthur's request. Both of us were afraid Kip would follow and kill Arthur.

"I called my husband on the telephone and asked him if I could buy a new pair of shoes. He said, 'No, you cannot have any new clothes until you quit Bates.'

"In my dream of trust in Arthur, I resented this from my husband and replied that I would run away. I met Arthur on Florence street that same night, with my suitcase and travelling bag packed, and ready to go away with him.

HAD A QUARREL.

"We walked until we reached Ash street. We quarrelled. He said he did not believe me when I told him I had brought the revolver along. I resented this. He wanted to see it. I showed it to him and then he demanded possession of it. I would not give it to him and he tried to take it away from me. Then the gun went off. He started to run away, and I must have lost my reason and fired several shots after him."

"Kip" has forgiven his wife for her going with Bates and has welcomed her back. She has been staying with Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hendershot, officers in the Salvation Army, the past few days.

BATES ACCUSES WOMAN.

But Bates told a different story in district court. And Patrolman William S. Wilson, who arrested Mrs. Bird, also testified that she admitted shooting Bates.

Bates admitted that he had kept her company for the past four or five years, and he admitted being told by the police to keep away from her. Furthermore, he admitted he paid no attention to Mr. Bird's warnings to stay away.

Bates said they had planned to elope, but when they met on the night of the shooting, he said he told her he would not go away with her; that he did not think it was the proper thing to do. He testified:

"She pressed the gun against my side and shot me. I turned around and started to run. She then said: 'I didn't kill you, did I? Arthur, come back here or I will kill you.'

"But I continued to run until I fell exhausted on someone's front porch and was taken to the Brockton Hospital."

DEATH SENTENCE IMPOSED ON BLUEBEARD

Slayer of Ten Women Bows as He Hears Doom; Female Spectators Faint

Versailles, Dec. 1.—Henri Landru, the notorious "Bluebeard of Gambais," will expiate on the guillotine the murder of ten women and a boy in his country villa near here.

The jury which for three weeks sat in the Assizes Court here while one of the most sensational murder trials in the history of French law wound its way to a close brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

Landru was sentenced to die on the guillotine.

Indescribable scenes arose in the courtroom when the jury returned its verdict condemning Landru. Four women fainted and many others rushed forward trying to get to the prisoner.

When he heard the verdict Landru rose from his chair impassively, and bowed. He said nothing as he was led away in the midst of a torrent of mingled applause and hisses.

After announcing its verdict the jury created a sensation by recommending Landru to the mercy of President Millerand. Moro Giafferi, Landru's attorney, announced that he will appeal from the verdict. Landru's sole declaration in his own defence was:

"I swear that I have killed no one."

The court presented a fantastic spectacle as dozens of fashionably garbed society women after the thrilling and impassioned speech of Landru's lawyer, Giafferi, rolled up their furs for pillows and laid down on the benches.

SOCIETY ATTENDS.

While the leaders of Paris society thus slept the jury, under strong guard, debated furiously the verdict which was to mean the guillotine or acquittal for the alleged Bluebeard.

Beauty, wealth and fashion filled the court as never before, the roster of names reading like a social register. It was estimated that not less than ten millions of francs' worth of jewelry was on display in the courtroom.

Landru's dramatically short speech at the end of the trial, his declaration of absolute innocence, came as a surprise. An impassioned declaration was expected, but after a moment of astonishment, the crowded courtroom broke into a wave of handclapping as though Landru was the star of a successful play. To the applause Landru turned a grateful smile, bowed and sat down.

FIANCEE GIVES HIM ROSE.

When the judge arose dozens of women pressed forward begging permission to shake the prisoner's hand. Among these was his former fiancee, Fernande Segret, a steadfast believer in his innocence, who, tendering him a white rose, said in the hearing of the whole court:

"I still love you, Landru, because I know you are innocent. I would kiss you if permitted."

Then the pretty young woman burst into tears and fought her way out of the room, sobbing.

The exclusive dispatch of Universal Service that the defense of Landru would rest upon the assertion that he was a white slaver, proved accurate when Attorney Giafferi advanced the theory that the prisoner might easily have sent the women to America or elsewhere. At this statement the jury seemed much impressed.

The audience of sophisticated society women did not even shudder at the statement, but on the contrary seemed to turn with more favor to the prisoner.

Landru Refuses to Ask for Clemency

Versailles, Dec. 1.—(By the Associated Press)—Henri Desire Landru, "the Bluebeard of Gambais," smiled last night for the first time since his trial opened. A flickering expression of amusement crossed his face as he listened to the words of Judge Gilbert sending him to the guillotine for a series of the most heinous crimes in the history of French jurisprudence.

"Thank you, gentlemen," said Landru, flourishing his weather beaten hat in a mocking bow to the jury, and he disappeared through the little door leading to the Versailles jail.

While the verdict was awaited, the convicted slayer of ten women and a boy spoke words of encouragement to his counsel, M. Moro-Giafferi, who, tired and worn out after his strenuous efforts to save his client from death, was on the verge of collapse.

"Strange it is that a man standing in the shadow of death should console his defender," Landru remarked at one time to those sitting nearby.

He refused to be party to a petition asking President Millerand to commute the sentence to life imprisonment, which was signed among others by the jurors. "I refuse to ask for mercy," he told the latter. "A man like me wants justice, not mercy. You think I am guilty; then let me die."

His remarks after reaching the cell were also characteristic of this strange character, the record of whose gruesome deeds as unfolded in the dingy Versailles courtroom has drawn the attention of all France and of thousands of persons in other countries. "It has been a great show," he said.

NOW PARIS WANTS TO BAR 'THEATRE COUGH'

Paris, Dec. 1.—Paris actors have decided to organize a campaign against the "theatre cough." Coughs, they say, have a habit of occurring at dramatic moments in the plays and spoiling the effect intended by the playwrights. There is little excuse for 75 per cent. of the "theatre coughs," according to French specialists, who say a moment's concentration when the cough is felt to be coming on will usually prevent it.

"FIANCEE" AND WIFE MOURN FOR LANDRU

Actress to Appear in New Play Based on Her Affair With Slayer

By International News Service.

Paris, Dec. 1.—Alone in a squalid room above a harness shop in the Montmartre district, where her husband had left her while he courted scores of "fiancees," the former wife of Henri Landru, "the modern Bluebeard," wept steadily today over the news he had been condemned to death.

"Although he was not true to me and we are divorced, I still love him," wailed the wife. "He could not help it that women loved him." Mme. Landru denied herself to all friends. She said she was too grief-stricken to see anyone.

Another woman who figures in the case of this sensational murderer is a gay, light-hearted actress, Fernande Segret. She was Landru's "last fiancee." They were living together when Landru was arrested, accused of the murder of ten women and a boy. Mlle. Segret lives in a fashionably furnished apartment. She hugged her Pekinese dog to her bosom and wiped her eyes with a pink embroidered handkerchief.

"It is too bad about Henri," she said. "I could not believe him guilty. I loved Henri. I did not believe he could harm a woman. When his trial was in progress I prayed daily for his acquittal."

Fernande's grief, however, did not keep her from her theatrical engagement. She is to appear tonight in a new revue at a Montmartre music hall and she said that she would be on hand without fail. The revue is called "Moulin de Lachanson," and was written especially for Fernande. It is supposed to portray some of the scenes of her life. Although very young, Fernande has had much experience. Mention of her relationship with "Bluebeard" Landru is contained in the play.

Mlle. Segret said she was to get [illegible]00 a week, but hoped to earn more later on when she goes to the United States for a tour.

The verdict condemning Landru to the guillotine seems to have won universal approval.

Landru rose at the usual hour this morning and drank a quantity of black coffee.

Referring to his prediction that he would eat his Christmas dinner in Paris," he grinned as he remarked "I was too hasty."

LAWRENCE GIRL HELD AS 'ROBBER BAND QUEEN'

Followed Youthful Sweetheart in Raids on Cottages, Police Say

Methuen, Dec. 1.—A romantic tale of how a pretty seventeen-year-old Lawrence girl elected to play the role of "robber band queen" to follow her nineteen-year-old sweetheart was revealed in the police court here today.

And with the arrest of five youthful members of the band and the girl, who is Ora King, of No. 296 Broadway, Lawrence, police believe they have put a stop to the depredations in the cottage colony along the Merrimac river. The boys were:

Arthur Baril, nineteen years old, of Westland street, Methuen, held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

Wilfred Thibedeau, sixteen, of Lawrence, returned to the Shirley School.

Arthur Thibedeau, seventeen, his brother, returned to the Lyman School.

Maurice Guimond, seventeen, returned to the Lyman School.

Ernest Chabot, fourteen, placed on probation.

The girl faced the court later in the day.

As the girl sat in her cell reading newspapers, she seemed the least disconcerted of the lot. "This is the life," she called gayly to her companions and tossed her head defiantly.

Leaving her home to follow her sweetheart, Baril, the police investigation revealed, she donned boy's clothes, and followed them to Boston last Monday, the six getting a ride on an auto truck as far as Charlestown, where they stopped for the night at a boarding house. The next day they were gathered in by Boston police.

Police scouring the district in search of robbers, came upon two in the act of entering a cottage. The rest of them and the girl escaped. Footprints led to a hollow tree, in which considerable loot was found cached.

Grilling the two young prisoners, enough information was drawn from them to implicate the rest and their arrests followed.

FITZHUGH IS GRILLED BY HENRY HURLBURT

Concord, N. H., Dec. 1. — Earl H. Fitzhugh testified here that in general, when he was president of the Central Vermont Railway in 1913, he worked in harmony with President Edson J. Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk. He disagreed with Mr. Chamberlin, however, when the latter proposed abandonment of the Southern New England Railroad propect, as he was opposed to a traffic agreement between the Grand Trunk and its subsidiary lines and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Mr. Fitzhugh was under cross-examination in his own suit against the Central Vermont and Grand Trunk Railways, and others, by Henry F. Hurlburt of Boston, of counsel for the defence.

CAVALRY MAKES 422 MILES IN 13 DAYS

Capt. Foster Says Men Arrived in Fine Shape; Advocates Open Air Training

Going 422 miles over the road from Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Vt., to Camp Dix in New Jersey with thirty-four mounted men of the United States army without a mishap, is the record of Captain Harry Foster, who commanded the detachment of cavalry. He reported today his achievement to Colonel H. G. Learnard, chief of staff of the First Corps Area.

Captain Foster and his men left Fort Ethan Allen November 7 and arrived at their destination November 20.

In speaking of his jaunt the captain said: "We had just ordinary horses with no pedigrees. We did the trick in thirteen days. No man was sick and we had few difficulties. On one day we made thirty-six miles.

SLEPT ON SNOW.

"The men at night slept in two blankets on the snow in some sequestered spot along the road. They had no earache or toothache from their long exposure to the elements.

"This experience has taught me one thing: that the more you live in the open air, the better you can be physically, mentally and every other way.

"In passing through different towns and villages I found people much interested in the trip and asking all sorts of questions. I concluded to answer them by holding meetings in the different towns, addressing the people and giving them such particulars about the army as would win young men to it.

WON SEVEN RECRUITS.

"In this effort I was not disappointed, for I picked up seven recruits for the cavalry and had them enlisted at Camp Dix, where they are now.

"If every young man would get out in the open more he would feel better. The army is the best place to get the air upon some of these jaunts. I did not open my first aid box once during the journey."

Captain Foster was highly complimented upon his achievement and left for his station, Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.

Wells Says U. S. Must Join Alliance to Be Successful Peacemaker

"Japanese Domination War or Alliance, Only Three Courses Open in Pacific."

"Britain Not Strong Enough to be the Lone Protector of the World."

> THE necessary alliance, to which France and Britain will presently assent, and which America will come to recognize as the only way to its peacemaking aims, will be against no one; it is an alliance of an entirely beneficial character, an alliance not to entangle but to release.—*From the article by H. NO. 18

America [illegible] Entangling Alliances.

The [illegible] of the American impulse towards a world peace is undeniable. It has produced in succession the great dream of a League of Nations and now this second great dream of a gradually developing Association of Nations arising out of a series of such conferences as this one. No other nation could have raised such hopes and no other political system has the freedom of action needed to give these projects the substance and dignity which the initiative of the head of the State involves.

But if these projects are to carry through into the world of accomplished realities, if in a lifetime or so this glorious dream of a world peace—going on, as a world at peace must now inevitably do—from achievement to achievement, if that dream is to be realized, certain peculiarities of the American people and the American situation have at no very distant date to be faced.

All such gatherings and conferences as this are haunted by a peculiar foggy ghost called "Tact," which is constantly seeking to cover up and conceal and obliterate some vitally important but rather troublesome reality in the matter. "Tact" is apparently a modern survival of the ancient "Tabu." For example, a pleasant Indian gentleman sits among the British delegates at the Conference; "Tact" demands that no one shall ever ask him, or of him, "What do you conceive will be the place of India in that great World Association, half a century ahead? Will it still be a British appendix?"

America Must Be Prepared to Pay.

And "Tact" becomes hysterical at the slightest whisper of the word "Senegalese," or any inquiry about the possible uses of the French submarine. And a third question, hitherto veiled by "Tact" under the very thickest wrappings of fog, to which greatly daring, I propose to address myself now is: "How far is America really prepared to fix and adhere to any wide schemes for the permanent adjustment of the world's affairs that may be arrived at by this Conference or its successors?"

The other day, a friend of mine in New York made a profoundly wise remark to me. "I have found," she said, "that one can have nothing and do nothing without paying for it. If you do well, or if you do ill, just the same you have to pay for it. If a mother wants to do her best by her children, she must pay for it in giving up personal ambitions, dreams of writing or art, throughout the best years of life.

"If a man wants to do his best in business or politics, he must sacrifice dreams of travel and adventure." And whatever America does with herself in the next few years, she, too, must be prepared to pay. If she desires isolation, moral exaltation, irresponsibility and self-sufficiency, "America for the Americans and never mind the consequences," she must be prepared to witness the decline and fall of the white civilization in Europe and the consolidation of a profoundly alien system across the Pacific.

If, on the other hand, she now takes up this task for which she seems so inclined, as the leader and helper of white civilization, the task of organizing the permanent peace of the world upon the lines of the system of civilization to which she belongs, then for that nobler role also there is a price to be paid. She has to assume not only the dignity but the responsibilities of leadership.

Monroe Doctrine First Great Feat.

She has not merely to express noble sentiments, but to lay hold upon the difficulties and intricacies of the problem before her. She has not merely to criticize, but to consider and sympathize and help, and she has to make decisions and abide by them.

When America really makes decisions, she abides by them—vigorously. The Monroe Doctrine was such a decision. It has saved South America for South America; it has saved Europe from a ruinous scramble for the Spanish inheritance. It was the first great feat of Americanism in world politics.

The exponents of "Tact" will, I know, be outraged by the reminder that for a long time the tacit approval of Britain and the existence of the British fleet provided a support and shield to the Monroe Doctrine, and also by the further reminder that the one serious attack upon it was made by Napoleon III. during the American Civil War—at which time, I admit, the attitude of Great Britain to the disunited States was also far from impeccable. But helped or assailed, the Monroe Doctrine held good.

The Washington conference has developed a position with regard to the Pacific that calls now for an American decision of equal vigor. It is as plain as daylight that Japanese liberal tendencies can be supported and the aggressive ambitions of Japanese imperialism can be restrained, that China can be saved for the Chinese and Eastern Siberia from foreign conquest, provided America places herself unequivocally side by side with Great Britain and France in framing and sustaining a definite system of guarantees and prohibitions in Eastern Asia. The Anglo-Japanese agreement could be ended in favor of such a new peace-pact and an enormous step forward toward peace would be made.

It would mark an epoch in world statescraft. But this means an agreement in the nature of a treaty; a mere presidential declaration, which some later President might set aside, or some newly elected Senate reverse, is not enough. If the reader will study the position of Australia and of the British commitments in Eastern Asia, he will see why it is not enough.

Three Courses to Take in Pacific.

Britain is not strong enough to risk being left alone as the chivalrous protector of a weak, if renascent China. She has her own people in Australia to consider. And besides, Britain alone—as the protector of China—after all that has happened in the past. . . . It is moral as well as material help in sustaining the new understanding that the British will require.

The plain fact of the Pacific situation is that there are only three courses before the world, either unchallenged Japanese domination in Eastern Asia from now on, or a war to prevent it soon, or an alliance of America, Britain and Japan, with whatever government China may develop, and with the other powers concerned, though perhaps less urgently concerned—an alliance of all these for mutual restraint and mutual protection.

And it is an equally plain fact, though "Tact" cries "Hush!" at the words, that the tradition of America for a hundred years, a tradition which was sustained in her refusal to come into the League of Nations, has been against any such alliance. George Washington's advice to his countrymen to avoid "entangling alliances" has been interpreted too long as an injunction to avoid any alliances, entangling or disentangling.

The habit of avoiding association in balance-of-power schemes and the like has broadened out into a general habit of non-association. But alliances which are not aimed at a common enemy, but only at a common end, were not, I submit, within the intention of George Washington.

Believes America Must Join Alliance.

At any rate, I do not see how the disarmament proposals of Mr. Secretary Hughes can possibly be accepted without a Pacific settlement, nor how that settlement can be sustained, except by some sort of alliance, meeting periodically in conference to apply or adopt the settlement to such particular issues as may arise. If America is not prepared to go as far as that, then I do not understand the enthusiasm of America for the Washington conference. I do not understand the mentality that can contemplate world disarmament without at least that much provision for the prevention of future conflicts.

And similarly, I do not see how any effectual disarmament is possible in Europe or how any dealing with the economic and financial situation there, can be possible, unless America is prepared to bind itself in an alliance of mutual protection and accommodation with at least France, Germany, Britain and Italy, to sustain a similar series of conferences and adjustments.

At the back of the French refusal to disarm, there is a suppressed demand for a protective alliance. That is an entirely reasonable demand. The form of this alliance that the French have demanded hitherto is an entangling alliance, an alliance of America and Britain and France against, at least, Germany and Russia.

The necessary alliance, to which France and Britain will presently assent, and which America will come to recognize as the only way to its peacemaking aims, will be against no one; it is an alliance of an entirely beneficial character, an alliance not to entangle but to release.

The disposition of the European delegations and of the British and foreign writers at Washington to treat the idea of America making treaties of alliance as outside the range of possibility, as indeed an idea "tabu," seems to me a profoundly mistaken one. It is "tact" in its extremest form.

I have heard talk of the "immense inertia" of political dogmas held for a hundred years. For "immense inertia" I would rather write "expiring impulse." The policy of non-intervention in affairs outside America was an excellent thing, no doubt, for a young republic in the self-protective state, it is a policy entirely unworthy of a republic which has now become the predominant State in the world.

6 MEN DROWN AS BARGES FOUNDER

Two Boston-Bound Craft Break Away From Tow and Go Down

Six men, some of whom may have been residents of Greater Boston, were drowned when two barges, bound from Norfolk to Boston, were broken loose from the tug Neptune and sunk off Navesink in a storm that raged the length of the Atlantic seaboard.

The barges were the Governor Robie and the Carrie Clark.

News of the fatalities was given in dispatches from New York. The reports did not contain the names of the victims.

According to the dispatch, the Neptune, with the barges in tow, was laboring against a head sea when the tow line suddenly parted. Released from her heavy load, the Neptune bounded forward, only to circle about and beat her way back through a welter of foaming seas in a vain effort to bring aid to the bargemen.

The helpless barges, heavily loaded, proved an easy prey for the fury of the storm, however, once the tow line which had held them head-on into the sea parted. Both of the ponderous craft swung broadside on and were washed from end to end by the high waves.

Watchers on the deck of the Neptune, straining their eyes to peer through the spray-laden dusk, finally saw first one and then both of the barges overwhelmed by mountainous seas from which they failed to emerge.

ICE HOUSE COLLAPSES AS RESULT OF STORM

Lowell, Dec. 1.—A big ice house collapsed at Baptist Pond, South Chelmsford, under the weight of sleet and snow. It was valued at $15,000 and was built by a New Bedford compnay. A dance hall on the boulevard in Lowell also caved in under weight of snow and ice.

WHITTLESEY IN WAR TALK JUST BEFORE SUICIDE

Told Toloa Passenger He Was Ill, Then Disappeared; Left 9 Letters

By Universal Service.

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 1.—Additional light has been thrown on the theory that Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey, famous commander of the "Lost Battalion" in the World War, was suffering from a mental collapse when he committed suicide some time early Sunday morning by leaping into the sea from the Havana-bound United Fruit steamship Toloa.

With the arrival here of the Toloa a wealthy Porto Rican, listed as M. Malaret on the ship's passenger roll, said that he and Colonel Whittlesey had been discussing the World War in the Toloa's smoking room at about 11 o'clock Saturday night, when Whittlesey, who seemed dejected, suddenly excused himself, saying he was indisposed.

A few hours later he was missing and letters telling of his intended action were discovered in his cabin. There were nine letters in all, written on his personal stationery, and enclosed in one envelope addressed to the Toloa's captain, Francis Grant.

SEARCHERS FIND DISMEMBERED BODY OF CHILD

Woman in Whose House Gruesome Discovery Was Made, Also Murdered

By International News Service.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Margaret Coughlin, three years old, missing since yesterday afternoon and believed to have been kidnaped, was found murdered today in the basement of a house occupied by Mrs. Ralph Pences at No. 1126 North Avers avenue.

Her dismembered legs and arms, wrapped in a newspaper, were smouldering on top of a stove. The torso and the head were found crammed into a wash boiler. Mrs. Pences was found murdered in a bedroom. Her throat had been cut.

The house was locked when police came to search it, and they battered in the doors when they saw smoke issuing from one of the basement windows.

Edward Coughlin, father of the slain girl, who was with the police in the search of the neighborhood, identified the gruesome bundle on top of the stove as parts of the body of his child.

Curley's Appeal Shows Little Respect for Intelligence of People of Boston

The proposal by Mr. Curley that each of the candidates opposed to Mr. Murphy appoint a representative to decide who, of the several candidates, shall stand as the opponent of Mr. Murphy, all the rest withdrawing, means one of two things. It means:

FIRST, that Mr. Pelletier's friends have made satisfactory arrangements with Mr. Curley for his withdrawal and that this scheme is a method by which Mr. Curley can withdraw without disgrace and still leave himself some remainder of political credit and some hope for a political future; or,

SECOND, that Mr. Baxter is even more of a stalking horse for Mr. Curley than the Republicans of the city charge him with being, for, if Mr. Curley is not attempting to cover up an understanding with Mr. Pelletier for Curley's withdraway by this scheme, he is relying upon Mr. Baxter's representative voting in favor of Mr. Baxter's withdrawal, Mr. O'Connor's withdrawal and Mr. Pelletier's withdrawal all in favor of Mr. Curley. One of these two things is absolutely certain.

Mr. Curley has been going from hall to hall telling the people of Boston that the fight was between himself and Mr. Baxter. Mr. Curley's present appeal that all the candidates, including Mr. Baxter, withdraw so that only one man can make the contest against Mr. Murphy shows how little respect he has for the intelligence of the people of Boston who go to hear him speak.

ANTI-BEER ACT IS ATTACKED IN BREWERY SUIT

Law Scored in Federal Court as Unconstitutional by St. Louis Concern

By Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—A suit attacking the anti-beer law as unconstitutional has been filed in Federal Court by the Falstaff Corporation, a local brewery.

Attorneys for the brewery say in their petition "that it was not the purpose of Congress to prohibit the use of liquor for non-beverage purposes, as is evidenced by the wording of the title of the National Prohibition Act." They also quoted the opinion rendered by former Attorney-General Palmer permitting beer for medicinal purposes.

The brewery was granted a permit to manufacture medicinal beer on November 8 and manufacture was started soon afterward, the petition states, with orders from a large number of druggists and physicians.

On November 28 the anti-beer bill was passed by Congress and two days later the brewery was ordered to stop making beer.

HAVE NO KNOWLEDGE THAT MORSE HAS SAILED

Washington, Dec. 1.—Officials in Washington today professed to have no knowledge of reports published in New York that Charles W. Morse, shipbuilder, had sailed for France. It was officially stated several days ago that ship contracts held by Morse and some of his associates with the government were to be made subject to grand jury investigation.

PRISONER GIVES OFFICERS HARD TUSSLE

Attempt to Flee From Courtroom Follows Battle With Policemen

Frederick Greenbush, alias Teddy Nowak, is lodged in a cell in the Charles street jail with the distinction, police say, of being one of the most troublesome prisoners they ever had to deal with.

To begin with, Greenbush didn't want to submit to arrest when he was halted by Sergeant Harvey and three patrolmen from the LaGrange street station in the early morning hours in the South End.

He resisted arrest so cheerfully and determinedly that two of the officers, Patrolmen Murphy and Sullivan, went to the City Hospital, Murphy with a badly bitten hand and Sullivan with a wrenched ankle.

Then, when Greenbush was placed in the prisoner's dock in the Municipal Court to answer to charges of carrying arms and drugs, he refused to stay put. The clerk called his name, but he failed to respond.

Court attendants looked in the dock, failed to find him, and concluded he had been taken back to his cell. Just before court adjourned, however, he was found hiding beneath one of the benches in the dock enclosure.

By Associated Press.

Centralia, Wash., Dec. 1.—Th fighting spirit of Marshal Foch wa aroused when he left his special tra here, passed the spot where fo members of the American Legi were slain on Armistice Day, 19 and then in the City Park addressi thousands of people, declared that enlisted under the banner of American Legion "to do battle agai anarchy and disorder."

"I knew the brave soldiers wh you sent to me from this city, f I saw them in action in France," he said. "And I have come to this to salute the memory of those w, having been spared the horrors of war, returned to fall under the lets of assassins.

"These men personify the spirit of patriotism and the spirit of self-sacrifice which lie at the base of the organization to which they belong—the American Legion. And as I see this great organization applying in time of peace the same splendid traditions and principles which applied so magnificently during the war I give to it my complete support and sympathy, and I inscribe myself on its muster rolls, with all my self for the battle against anarchy and disorder."

CURLEY'S 'PLOT' STORY RAPPED BY MURPHY

John R. Murphy, James M. Curley, Charles S. Baxter and Charles S. O'Connor eloquently argued their own claims to the mayoralty at a meeting of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange at the Boston City Club. Joseph C. Pelletier was invited, but was unable to attend.

Candidate Murphy declared that it was a pity a man running for office in this city should have to waste so much time denying false statements.

Referring to Curley, he said: "The gentleman seems unable to confine himself to the truth. He has said repeatedly that insurance charges soared here as the result of a conspiracy between the underwriters, the Good Government Association and myself as fire commissioner.

"I am told he is saying that $12,500,000 has been taken in premiums more than would have been collected if this 'collusion' had not existed. The Boston fire insurance rates did not increase. It was the enormous value of the goods, stored in a seaport during time of war, that was mainly responsible for the increase of premiums."

James M. Curley told the real estate men he came before them "with a record of pledges fulfilled rather than one replete with promises that could not be fulfilled."

Turning to his favorite subject of property assessment, Curley said: "Out in Dorchester, where there are wooden houses, there has been an increase of 20 per cent. in valuation and in the city residential district between Boylston street and the Charles River, the advance has been 1½ per cent."

Curley told his hearers that it would be "an insult to the intelligence of Boston to do other than support James M. Curley for Mayor."

Charles S. O'Connor said that he was setting the pace and making the issue in the mayoralty campaign and that the others were following him at some distance.

Charles S. Baxter referred to the cry that a Republican couldn't be elected in Boston as "propaganda" and to the charge that he was in the mayoralty race to help Curley as "vicious propaganda."

Curley Leaves Withdrawal With Committee of Three

James M. Curley's offer to withdraw from the contest for mayor of Boston in the event a committee of three citizens does not find him to be the strongest candidate of the four opposed to the election of John R. Murphy was widely discussed today by politicians.

Curley's proposal was made in a statement in which he said:

"I will put this fair and square proposition to Messrs. Pelletier, O'Connor and Baxter. They all declare the election of Murphy would be a calamity for Boston. Do either of them think they can beat Murphy? Do they or any one of them think they are stronger than Curley? If they do, then let them accept this proposition."

Candidate O'Connor Addresses Two Rallies

School Committeeman Charles S. O'Connor spoke at two crowded rallies in the Bowditch School, and the Lowell School, Jamaica Plain, last night. The candidate said in part:

"Like every other residential section of the city, Jamaica Plain has been neglected at City Hall. The example I know of is the street in front of this hall. Since the beginning of the Summer the street has been torn up. Rough crushed stones lie on the street where men and women alight from the cars; pools of water and vast expanses of mud represent what the city has been trying to make a thoroughfare of for months.

"Another glaring example is your car service. Now the State-protected Elevated Street Railway is trying to take away your direct service to the subway via Huntington avenue."

Baxter Promises to Improve Boston's Port

Continuing his claim that he is entitled to support in the mayoralty contest because he is a Republican, Charles S. Baxter, in two campaign addresses, declared that if elected Mayor of Boston he would take immediate steps to improve the port of Boston and bring additional shipping here.

Murphy's Work Stopped Storm Damage in Boston

That Boston was saved from being thrown into darkness and suffering the collapse of telephone, telegraph and fire-alarm systems in the havoc wrought by the sleet storm throughout New England was due entirely to the system of underground wires devised and installed by John R. Murphy was declared today by Superintendent of Wires Walter J. Burke.

"The system was devised and installed by Mr. Murphy when he was Wire Commissioner of Boston. Not a single, radical change has been made in all these years from the system originated by him."

Pelletier and Curley to Stay in the Race

Both James M. Curley and District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier will go to the polls this Mayoralty campaign, according to the most definite indications in the many campaign headquarters today.

Mr. Curley, it is reported, has engaged Symphony Hall for Saturday night, the night after withdrawals, and there will attempt to put on one of the biggest rallies of the campaign.

MISSION WORK TO BE SHOWN IN PAGEANT

Centennial Anniversary to Be Marked Sunday at St. Paul Cathedral Church

At the Cathedral Church of St. Paul on Tremont street, next Sunday, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, there will be presented a pageant instead of the story at the children's church. This pageant is being prepared by the young people of the cathedral in honor of the 100th anniversary of the organized mission work of the Episcopal church. It was written by William Chauncey Langdon, and the music is by Marchus H. Carroll.

There are about 30 characters in the pageant, only a few of whom, however, have speaking parts. The boy choir of the Cathedral will assist in the musical part, and among those who take part is Miss Nina Johnson, who has recently returned from China, where she has had several thrilling experiences during the past five years.

The three principal parts will be taken by Harold Campbell, Robert Pease and William Burton. Barbara Byers, Elizabeth Ryse, Lillian Dydes and Mathilda Zayady will impersonate angels. The two branches of the mission work of the church will be two groups. The domestic missions' group will be represented by Einar Lagerdlade, Florence Buckingham, Marion Everett, Lillian Ginder, Gladys Coates, Ruby Budd and little Marion Hilts. There will also be Chinese mandarins and Chinese coolies, and several of the older Cathedral workers will take the parts of mission workers.

PELLETIER SPEAKS AT THREE RALLIES TONIGHT

District Attorney Pelletier will speak at rallies this evening at the following places in the order named: Municipal Building, Broadway, South Boston; Ward Room, Ward 2, Maverick and Bremen streets, East Boston; Roughan Hall, City Square, Charlestown.

Mother Told to Choose Between Cigarettes and Daughter

New Haven, Dec. 1.—"Choose between cigarettes and your daughter."

This was the verdict of Judge Allyn L. Brown when Mrs. Adeline Palmer Lee, who is suing for divorce from Dr. Harry M. Lee, demanded the custody of her six-year-old daughter, now in Brooklyn.

It was charged at the hearing that Mrs. Lee smokes between 400 and 500 cigarettes weekly, and she admitted using them.

DURANT CAMPAIGN GETS 125 NEW MEMBERS

FLANAGAN ESTATE LEFT TO SISTERHOOD

The will of Joseph F. Flanagan of Newton, who died November 22, has been filed in the Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge. No valuation of the estate was given.

He left his Newton real estate, with the exception of a piece of property at No. 189 Jackson road, to the Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston. The rest of the estate is distributed privately. Mrs. Mary A. Flanagan, his wife, and the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Company are named as executors.

BABY CRIES FOR MOTHER GONE A WEEK

Search for Charlestown Woman Who Disappeared Thanksgiving Proves Futile

Baby Billy Turner is crying for his missing mother, and the little home at No. 35 Park street, Charlestown, is a place of sorrow, for no word of Mrs. Alwine Turner has been received since she left home on the evening of Thanksgiving Day.

William Turner, Sr., a veteran of the World War, is heart broken at the disappearance of his young wife whom he married in New York after his discharge from the army.

"She seemed happy, and when we had a little party at the house Thanksgiving evening she was the life of the party," said Turner.

"Early in the evening she said she must go into Boston to see some friends on Southampton street and asked me to go, but as we had company I couldn't very well. When she failed to return late in the evening I went over and found she had not been there."

Turner notified police at once, but no trace of the woman has been found. Mrs. Turner, her husband explained, has been very nervous since the birth of their son about a year ago.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Is Every Day a Backache Day?

ARE you dragging along day after day, with a dull, nagging backache? Does morning find you tired, lame and stiff? And when evening comes are you all worn out—barely able to finish the day's duties and drag yourself to bed? Truly life can hold few pleasures when you feel so miserable. But don't be discouraged! Just realize that a cold, a chill, or a strain, has likely weakened your kidneys and brought on that all-day backache; those sudden, stabbing pains; the headaches, dizziness and bladder difficulties. But fortunately, kidney disorders are usually easily correctd, if treated promptly. So don't worry! Simply take things easier for awhile—get plenty of fresh air, rest, and sleep, and help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

Read How These Boston Folks Found Relief:

Mrs. Sarah J. Brycen, 59 Appleton St., says: "I suffered from a disordered condition of my kidneys. My greatest trouble was lumbago and this settled in the lower part of my back and hips. This made my back tired. Knowing what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for others, I decided to try them. It only took a couple boxes of Doan's to cure the lumbago and my back has been strong ever since."

M. J. Daley, painter, 48 Furness St., Revere, says: "The fumes of the turpentine from the paint was the cause of my kidneys being in a disordered condition. I could hardly stoop enough to pick up a small pail of paint, and to reach up was impossible. The least turn would send pains through my kidneys. A few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

Mrs. N. G. McManus, 62 Harrison Av., Woburn, says: "I was suffering with a weak and lame back and my kidneys were disordered. I thought it was caused by over-working, but as my back continued to pain, I decided my kidneys were at fault. I had headaches and dizzy spells and always felt drowsy and languid. It did not take Doan's Kidney Pills long to build me up and cure me." Over two years later Mrs. McManus said: "I have not noticed a single symptom of kidney complaint since Doan's cured me."

Eat for Energy

In the old days they prescribed iron tonics for the tired and run-down people. Now doctors know that this iron is contained in certain foods which are easily absorbed, effective and natural.

Of these iron-foods, raisins are the richest; and one should eat them every day. A famous Battle Creek sanitarium serves stewed raisins for breakfast. There is luscious raisin pie, delicious raisin bread, and rich, sweet cluster raisins.

You need but a small bit of food-iron every day, yet this need is vital. So remember

Your Aunt Emma spurned our Bond—

AUNT EMMA drops in now and then at your family table and says: "Just a morsel—just a morsel." And she keeps saying it right through her second and third helping.

She was rightly suspicious when you told her that at last you could give up baking bread at home—that you had discovered a bread which is made with the same pure home ingredients that you always used.

She told you that somebody had been fooling you. And then you got your spunk up and said:

"But this is so. With this loaf of bread you get a Bond which absolutely guarantees that it is made of the purest home ingredients—real milk—fine flour—granulated sugar—table salt—fresh compressed yeast—and purest lard."

You led her out in the kitchen and let her read the Bond on the bread-wrapper. She merely shook her head.

You cut a slice and buttered it and handed it over without a word. She took one bite, looked up, took another, and then, for almost the first time since you have known her, Aunt Emma actually smiled.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Elite Interested in Industrial School Antique Exhibit

By BETTY ALDEN.

ANTIQUES:

What a strong appeal the word has for so many. And that is why not a few are anticipating the private exhibition of antique furniture and objects of art which is to take place next Monday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at the North Bennet Street Industrial School.

On Monday afternoon those who have been sent invitations will be given an opportunity of seeing very rare bits of antiquity as well as works of art, including mirrors, iron work, pottery, jewelry and tapestries. These pieces were all collected with assiduous care by the director of the North Bennet School during the latter's travels in France and Spain this last Summer. I am told that the collector of these choice bits secured them at unusually low prices by browsing about in mountain towns and other off-the-beaten-track places. Here is an opportunity, therefore, to buy unusual Christmas gifts at remarkably small cost.

Following the invitation exhibition next Monday, tea will be served, at which the following matrons and maids of the smart set will act as hostesses: Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Gorham Brooks, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mrs. Harold Coolidge, Miss Pauline Fenno, Mrs. Russell G. Fessenden, Mrs. John Homans, Jr., Miss Miriam Ladd, Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Mrs. Harry Lyman, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, Miss Gertrude Sturgis, Miss Sylvia Warren and Marquesa A. Ferrante.

On the following day, Tuesday, December 6, there will be a public exhibition and sale of this same antique and art collection at the North Bennet House. The exhibition, which is to continue for one week, will be open daily from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m., and Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 until 8 o'clock.

Prices, one hears, are to range all the way from a mere half dollar to a less-mere thousand dollars. The jury and committee on arrangements for the sale is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Bigelow, Mrs. Frederic L. Day, Miss Ethel A Forbes, Miss Mabel Sturgis, F. L. W. Richardson, R. Clipton Sturgis and Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Warren.

The North Bennet School is at the corner of North Bennet and Salem streets.

"Something Different" is the slogan chosen for the bazaar to be given by the Massachusetts Public Interests League, beginning today and continuing on Friday and Saturday, at No. 99 Newbury street.

The first step along the line of novelty was taken by the committee in charge when the latter chose a large, untenanted house in which to hold the bazaar, rather than a hall or hotel, as is usually done. Each room of the house is to be completely furnished—one as a living room, another as a nursery, kitchen, dining room and so on down the list, and in each of these rooms articles suitable to the room will be sold.

In the living room, for instance, books and other articles for library furnishing will be on sale, with a group of prominent Wellesley women in charge. Many autographed books have been donated for the occasion.

Society matrons from Milton, headed by Mrs. John Balch, are to have charge of the kitchen department, including goodies for the pantry shelf. In fact, no less than 1,000 jars of jellies, jams and pickles, as well as fresh figs packed in sugar, home-made salted nuts and other dainties are to fill this shelf.

The luncheon, which will be served daily in the dining room, promises to be an outstanding feature of the bazaar. It is under the supervision of Mrs. Edwin Ford who has marshalled a force of society girls for waitresses. The large drawing room has been given over largely to flowers, pictures, et cetera, for the occasion.

To judge from the plans of the committee as chronicled above, one should say the "something different" has really been obtained, despite the fact that there has been a steady stream of bazaars this last month, each one striving—and some succeeding—to attain that elusive "something different."

Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, leader among the Newport set, is very much in the social limelight these days. As the niece of Mrs. E. Rollins Morse of Boston, Mrs. Wilson's comings and goings are of interest to members of Hub society.

On Tuesday of this week the onetime Marian Mason gave a luncheon in her new home at No. 30 Park avenue for the Marchioness of Donegal. Mrs. Wilson, who always makes a charming hostess, had her debutante daughter, Louisa, help her entertain. Among the guests who gathered to meet the titled English woman were: Mesdames William Fahnestock, Marshall Orne Wilson, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Augustus F. Kountze, Chauncey Olcott, Stuart Duncan, Brady Harriman, Minturn Pinchot, Belmont Tiffany, Moses Taylor Campbell, Miss Mabel Gerry and the Countess Dru de Mongelas.

Mrs. Wilson will give two teas in her home in December. The first, on December 11, is to be for her daughter, Louisa Stedman Wilson, and will be almost entirely for the debutantes and members of their circles. The second, on December 18, is to be for Mrs. Wilson's other friends.

Betty Alden.

The touch of the Orient is a very notable one at bazaars these days. Miss Virginia Parker of Chestnut Hill is seen wearing a costume of the Far East in which she appeared at a recent charity event.

Miss June Ripley of Boston was among the debutantes who were in the receiving line at the large luncheon party given by Mrs. Reinhard Siedenburg, Jr., at her home on Fifth avenue, New York, in honor of her daughter, Miss Paula Siedenburg. Seventy-two "debs" attended the luncheon, which was followed by a matinee, and later, by a small dance at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft of Boston are spending a few days at the new Ambassador Hotel in New York. Other Bostonians at the Ambassador include Miss Rose L. Dexter of Beacon street.

Arrivals from Boston at the Hotel Chatham in New York include Percy Lee Atherton, William Endicott and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Morse.

The Misses Francesca and Bertha Braggiotti entertained the members of the cast who took part in the second matinee given by the Cercle Franca's of Harvard University in aid of devastated France. Many society folk attended the performance, which was given in the Copley Theatre. The Misses Bragiotti were also of the cast.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer has donated a beautiful seal coat for the G. O. P. bazar which will take place early this month, and in which many prominent society matrons are interesting themselves.

MARINES WILL STAY ON TRAINS, SAYS HAYS

Washington, Dec. 1.—"The United States mails must be inviolate and the department will go to any lengths to keep them so," was the reply sent by Postmaster General Hays to Governor Blaine of Wisconsin, who protested against the shooting of a man in that State by a marine guarding the mail car. The Postmaster General announced that the marines will be kept on guard until the present reign of bandit terror is over and that it is not his intention to alter or modify the orders given them for the protection of the mails.

STOLEN TRUNK THOUGHT TO BE NEWTON WOMAN'S

Mrs. John Peters of Newton has been asked by the police of [illegible], N. Y., to identify as her property a trunk and contents, valued at $1,800, stolen from a baggage room of the New York Central. Railroad police traced the trunk to a lonely farmhouse occupied by Mrs. Frank Jutkiewicz, Albion, N. Y. Several other trunks found there led the detectives to believe they had uncovered a "harbor of missing trunks."

BOSTON HAS SMALLEST PER CENT. OF MURDERS

The Choice of the World

Boston, London, Paris, or Pekin—wherever you see well-dressed women—there you will see the sparkle of the diamond. For the diamond is the stone which for centuries has been the one most liked all over the world.

The diamond has a clear beauty that never clashes with any complexion or costume. It may be set alone, in clusters, or with other stones—its brilliance never diminishes.

A Christmas gift of a diamond bar pin, a dinner ring, or a pendant will delight your wife or your wife-to-be. It is the gift for all time, above the whim of fashion or the color of the year.

We have been diamond merchants for one hundred and twenty-one years. We have seen fads in jewelry come and go, but we, like the jewelers of other countries and other days, have never known the time when women did not enjoy the possession of diamonds.

Shop Early

TOYS

The advice to shop early applies with especial force in the buying of toys. Early shopping will save you trouble and disappointment and may save you from disappointing the children. If you leave the purchase of Toys until the last two or three days before Christmas, the assortment may be so broken that you cannot find what you know the children most want. Even if you do find it there may not be time enough left to have the Toys packed properly and shipped in time to reach their destination before Christmas morning.

'LOST' ROXBURY POLICEMAN RETURNS

Officials Start Probe of Reason for Absence of Samuel Pollock

Police officials at the Roxbury Crossing station today are investigating the unexplained disappearance from duty of Officer Samuel Pollock, who returned to his home at No. 862 Huntington avenue after an absence that neither his superiors nor members of his family could explain.

Pollock, records show, was on duty Sunday night. Monday was his day off, and on Tuesday evening he was supposed to report again for duty. But he failed to appear, and inquiries at his home brought the statement that members of his family did not know where he was.

The officer on returning home went promptly to bed. When a reporter called at the house he was told the officer was too ill to see anyone, and was also informed that members of the family could give no information as to his whereabouts.

Earlier in the evening the officer's father had said that he had no idea of where his son had been.

Pollock's superiors say that he has always had a very good record as a police officer. Some time ago he was attacked by a number of rowdies when he attempted to make an arrest, and was beaten so severely he had to go to the hospital for a time. Friends said they feared the effects of this attack may have caused a temporary mental derangement.

Pollock served with the marines during the war.

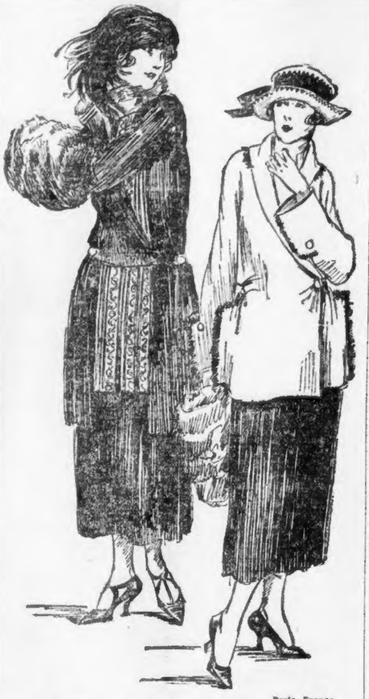
Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne



Paris, France.

THE tailleur for Winter makes its appearance by way of Paris in two smart and pleasing forms. The three-quarter-length coat of a Martial et Armand tailleur in dark blue velours de laine, sketched above at the left, offers a choice between being a double-breasted and revealing the upper portion of a long gilet of strips of black braid. In the latter event a rever trimmed with a strip of the braid, turns back waist deep, while a panel of the braid is applied at the back of the coat skirt. The standing collar and tight cuffs are of gray fox fur.

LUCIEN LELONG'S trotteur of yellow and black cloth has a sporting air derived from the dashing line of the coat itself, as well as from the details it presents. Narrow fringes of black silk trim the cuffs where customarily they are untrimmed, and leave the collar bare where it might be fringed, while outstanding fringed sections over the hips repeat the idea of the extended cuffs. The one-piece skirt is wide enough to be practical and as long as is considered proper for the modish tailleur. For this costume a yellow cloth hat is trimmed with black satin.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THE fact that a British-made film is being shown at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week is interesting from the point of view of contrast with our American pictures. In this contrast, "Judgment," the film in question, shows up to poor advantage, for there is little or nothing in it that the American producer cannot equal and almost invariably better.

The one value that "Judgment" has is that it is a screen version of Victor Hugo's drama, "Mary Tudor." It is one way of bringing the classics to the attention of a too often slighting world. Another value is the portrayal of Ellen Richter as "Bloody Mary." Miss Richter gives a forceful impersonation.

The story deals with but a part of the reign of Queen Mary, with the attention focussed on her love affair with the intriguer, Fabiani Fabiano.

In trying to open the queen's eyes to his duplicity Master Renard, ambassador from the King of Spain, uses methods that make up a story of intrigue.

PHOTOGRAPHY IS POOR.

The chief thing that one notices is that the photography is so poor. The lighting leaves much to the imagination. In our own films—I speak, of course, of those made in the United tSates—we have grown to expect soft outlines, clear figures, and more or less evenly lighted scenes. For that reason, a film whose photography dates back when pictures were in their so-called "infancy" comes as a distinct shock.

Ellen Richter, as I said, is good as the queen. The names of the rest of the players are not given nor do they need mention, save for the man who appeared as Master Renard. He stood out above the rest of the cast for his playing of a role that was not in itself difficult. That again may have been contrast.

The companion picture on the bill at the Modern and Beacon Theatres, "A Wife's Awakening," can be dismissed with a word: it by no means measures up to average, despite the fact that it has been put out by Robertson Cole and that it was directed by Louis Gasnier. Chief among its faults is the company that has been chosen to play it. Headed by Fritzie Brunette as the wife who awakens, it is uniformly ill-played. True, William P. Carleton gives one of his well-repressed portrayals, but it would have shown up to better advantage with better fellow-players.

VALENTINO SIGNS UP.

WHEN Rudolph Valentino was picked by the Famous Players-Lasky concern for the title role of "The Sheik," which, by the way, is drawing capacity houses to the Park Theatre, his engagement was for the duration of the production.

Now word comes that that company has persuaded him to sign on the dotted line for a long-term contract, which calls for a weekly salary of $2,000. Valentino is undoubtedly one of our most promising players at the present time. He has brought a suavity, an urbanity with his playing that no other actor has given us. May he be given the vehicles that will help him bring out these characteristics.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.

GREAT OVATION ACCORDED TO CHALIAPIN

Famed Russian Basso Cheered by Capacity Audience in Symphony Hall

Russia's greatest singer, Feodor Chaliapin, scored a triumph in Symphony Hall last night before one of the largest audiences of the season. He was accorded one of the most enthusiastic receptions ever given a singer in this city. His triumph was complete. Seldom has such applause been heard in Boston's great temple of music as was given the great Russian basso, last night. He sang sixteen songs in Russian.

It was the first appearance of Chaliapin in this city. He was scheduled to sing here several days ago, but his concert was postponed because of illness. Not only was every seat in the hall taken at the performance, but hundreds of enthused Russians stood in the aisles.

Chaliapin has an heroic physique to match his rich, well-rounded voice. Although at one time a shoemaker in Russia, he gave up that trade to join a troupe of strolling singers. He is regarded by many as the world's finest bass. If there are any that are better Bostonians would like to hear them. This is his first appearance in the United States in 14 years. For a short time he sang with the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. Since then his voice has softened and is much improved.

In accordance with his custom, he announced the selections from the platform. His best-liked numbers were Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers," with which he literally swept the great audience off its feet; Malashkin's "Oh, Could I But Express in Song," and Moussorgsky's "Song of the Flea." The last named he sang twice because of insistent applause.

He was assisted by Joseph Stopak, violinist; Victoria Boshko, pianist, and Leo Berdichevsky, pianist.

KU KLUX KLAN FORMED IN MANCHESTER, N. H.

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 1.—According to statements of F. H. Jackson, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan, made as he was boarding a train here for New York, a branch of the Ku Klux was organized in this city Tuesday night with forty six members. Jackson declined to make public the names of any of the officials or members, where the meeting was held or when the Klan would meet again, declaring that secrecy was one of the chief assets of the organization and had been capitalized by it. He claimed that branches have been organized in Lancaster, Concord and Dover.

THOUSANDS OF HOMES STILL IN DARKNESS

Desperate Efforts Made to Rush Work of Repairing Damage by Sleet Storm

Although the storm which swept over eastern Massachusetts and a large part of New England over the week-end has given way to milder weather, its after effects, in the shape of interrupted lighting and telephone service and hampered street car and interurban schedules, are still in large part unremedied.

Thousands of homes within a short radius of Boston are still without lights, and many manufacturing establishments are still closed, due to lack of electric power. Property damage will run well into the millions, and many highways, blocked by falling wires, trees and telephone poles, are yet to be cleared.

LIGHTS SLOWLY RESTORED.

Officials of the Boston Edison Company announced last night that partial service had been restored in Somerville and Brookline, which had, since Sunday, been in total darkness. Especial attention was being paid to repair lighting circuits to hospitals and homes where there were sick people, with manufacturing plants and fire alarm signals receiving next attention. A force of 500 men is at work in the district striving to repair the damage caused by the sleet and wind.

Ten thousand telephone subscribers still remain to be connected with the outside world, and officials of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company state that it will probably be weeks before complete repairs have been made on all their branches. Fully 2,000 repair men are at work today mending the damage done by snapping wires and falling poles.

TROLLEYS RUNNING.

A number of towns remain practically isolated from the rest of the country, although interurban trolley service is being restored to normal with considerable speed. The last country line of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. has been reported cleared, and it is expected that within a day or two all trolley lines will be running practically as usual.

In many places the full police and fire department forces were still kept patrolling the darkened streets throughout the night, although the speed with which electric power concerns are rushing repairs on their lines to city lighting circuits, is bringing light to street lamps in many towns and cities where private homes are still dependent on candles.

Thousands of trees, including a large number of valuable fruit trees, have been destroyed by the storm. It is hoped, however, that a large percentage of trees badly damaged may, after all, be saved by tree experts.

Says Every Railroad Man Should Read This

Peterson's Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sirs: I was afflicted with what the doctors said were Varicose Ulcers, and up until about five weeks ago I have been treating them for about a year and five months.

With all the treatments that were prescribed to me by several doctors I received little benefit, and they kept spreading and gave me much distress and caused me to quit my work.

I was induced by a brother brakeman to try Peterson's Ointment, and after I had used two boxes I saw wonderful results. You can tell suffering ones troubled with ugly, painful and horrid ulcers that your Ointment is a cure for them when everything else fails, as I have tried about everything. Thanking you many times over I am, your happy friend, Chas. J. Heyser, Battle Creek, Mich., 42 Glenwood Avenue, January 12, 1916.

64 PRISONERS SUFFOCATED IN TRAIN

Men Denied Water While Dying, Officer Testifies at Inquiry in India

Tirur, India, Nov. 29—(By the Associated Press).—Testimony as to the circumstances surrounding the suffocation recently of sixty-four Moplah prisoners while being transferred from Shoranur to Bellary in a closed railway wagon was taken by the official commission of inquiry here today (Tuesday).

The reserve policeman in charge told of the prisoners shouting for water during the journey, and said he refused to heed their cries because it was not customary to furnish water on these trips. When the Moplahs entered the wagon, he testified, they appeared to be in a healthy condition.

The policeman described the scene in the van when the front compartment was opened at Podanur. All the prisoners were lying down; many were unconscious and the others were groaning.

The inspector for the South Indian Railway testified that only subsequently to the tragedy was it discovered that the mesh of the wire ventilating gauze in the van had been blocked by a fresh application of paint.

Rum Tank Had Pipe That Emptied It Into Sewer

Owing to the illness of Sergeant Edmund Ivers the case of Joseph P. Little, proprietor of a near-beer saloon on Rutherford avenue, charged with keeping and exposing liquor for sale, was continued until December 12, when called for trial in the Charlestown Court. Little entered a plea of not guilty to the charge. The police allege that they worked for four hours in the saloon before they found liquor, and then it was only a half pint, which they drained from a copper tank, cement sheathed, and buried in the basement floor. From the tank a pipe led upstairs to the end of the bar, where a faucet either directed the liquor to the bar tap or into another pipe, which emptied into a sewer.

FRAZIER U. S. CHARGE IN AUSTRIAN CAPITAL

MURPHY SCORNS PROPOSAL OF CURLEY

Declares Idea of Selecting Impartial Committee to Pick Candidates Is Absurd

Attorney Charles H. Morris, manager of the John R. Murphy campaign for mayor, said today:

"Curley's proposal that he put his feet under the same table with Pelletier, Baxter and O'Connor and there select an 'impartial' committee to decide which three of them shall get out of the race is absurd.

"Curley and Pelletier have had an offensive and defensive alliance for years. It continues unbroken. Baxter is Curley's Republican candidate. A vote for him is a vote for Curley.

"What a fine chance Charlie O'Connor would have at a conference with that gang.

"Curley, Pelletier and Baxter will have no difficulty in getting a committee. The committee would be Daniel H. Coakley, Daniel H. Coakley and Daniel H. Coakley.

"Curley has been about town asserting that several thousand people have signed pledge cards for him. I think in one of his speeches he stretched the number to 65,000. Who is going to protect their rights at this conference? Does Curley regard those pledges' as mere scraps of paper? If any withdrawals are made they will be decided by a secret covenant, secretly arrived at."

STEEL FIRMS IN HALF BILLION MERGER

Seven Independent Companies Combine to Cover Every Branch of the Industry

By Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 1.—Reports that a merger of seven or more of the independent steel companies is contemplated were confirmd in the financial district today.

The proposed consolidation will take in all the leading producers and manufacturers with the exception of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Jones & Laughlin Company of Pittsburgh.

The capitalization of the various companies concerned approximates $500,000,000, and the products of the various companies cover almost every branch of the steel and iron industry.

The companies named comprise the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company, the Republic Iron and Steel Company, Lackawanna Steel Company, Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, Inland Steel Company, [illegible]er Steel Company and the Steel and Tube Company of America.

Reports of a consolidation have been current in the trade for more than a year.

This consolidation, if effected, will be second in importance to the U. S. Steel Corporation, now the dominant organization in the industry.

$182,000 RAISED FOR SALVATION ARMY

At the meeting of the Salvation Army fund chairmen the reports showed additional subscriptions amounting to $7,300, which brings the total of subscriptions and pledges up to $182,000, leaving a balance of $18,000 to be raised.

Chairman Johnson said he had no doubt but the entire amount of $200,000 would have been raised several days ago if it had not been for the weather, which upset the calculations of the solicitors in all the groups.

Of the amount collected yesterday the Salvation Army group turned in $3,123. Samuel T. Pattison of the clothing group brought in $2,100. The John T. Connor Company gave $500 and the employes of that company subscribed $332.85. These amounts added to what had been previously received makes a total of $3010 subscribed by the grocers' group, and only $10 of this amount was pledged.

The heating and ventilating contractors' group turned in $172 over their guarantee of $1,000. The coal group has turned in $2,098. One of the chairmen who had already pledged himself to raise $1,000 raised his pledge to $1,500.

The Secret of Good Health

Assist Nature back to normal action

When Nature requires assistance, she will not be slow in conveying to you an intimation of the fact. Decline of energy, inability to sleep well, headache, biliousness, constipation, a general sluggishness of mind and body and any sign of digestive "unrest" should impel you to seek the aid of a reliable medicine without delay. There is no better—no surer—no safer—than this proven remedy.

In a crowd protect yourself from throat germs

Riding in the crowded car, going along the dusty street, sitting in the stuffy office, theatre or school, you are bound to inhale the germs of disease. These germs lodge in the soft tissues of the mouth and throat and if unchecked, may develop into a dangerous ailment.

Formamint, the germ-fighting throat tablet, can be conveniently used at any time or in any place you may be. At the first sign of a sore throat, or when you are exposed to germs, take a tablet and let it dissolve slowly in your mouth. Can be beneficially taken every half hour until throat is relieved.

Formamint mixes its powerful, pleasant tasting antiseptic with the saliva, bathing the infected membranes continuously; combats the germs and keeps them at a safe minimum.

The tablets are so convenient to carry with you, that they can be used unnoticeably wherever you may be. Buy a package from your druggist today, and be prepared to ward off sore throats, tonsillitis and influenza. Men find them very helpful in easing "smokers' sore throat."

Recommended by throat specialists, physicians, dentists and druggists.

CHINESE AFRAID OF REVOLT OVER JAP DEMANDS

Mikado's Delegates Refuse to Lessen Hold in Any Way on Manchuria

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

[illegible] At the meeting [illegible] on Far Eastern [illegible] the positions of [illegible] on Shantung and [illegible] of Kiaochau [illegible] point of conflict [illegible] Mr. Balfour offers [illegible] their good offices [illegible] could fix up a [illegible] and there the [illegible]

[illegible] was a statement [illegible] to lessen [illegible] hold on Manchuria. [illegible] Chinese situation is so [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] some Chinese here are [illegible] and demonstrations [illegible] not improbably an overturn of the government.

[illegible] it is not settled there is a [illegible] the next [illegible] next Wednesday [illegible] Friday.

[illegible] Mr. Balfour will [illegible] try to work [illegible] difficulties [illegible] at [illegible] will have representatives to report progress. The meeting will be held this afternoon.

The Chinese were badly discouraged [illegible] Some of the [illegible] of the delegates [illegible] to have [illegible] than at [illegible] that [illegible] the route [illegible] by Mr. Hughes and Mr. [illegible]

The more optimistic among them believe that Japan will make some [illegible] in Shantung as the [illegible] for standing absolutely pat [illegible]

The [illegible] Japan will think it wise to [illegible] from her [illegible] by most of [illegible] probably [illegible] even today.

JAPS SEE G. O. P. POLITICS.

[illegible] their bluff about [illegible] the Japanese are playing for other things held in the back [illegible] Manchuria and [illegible] One thing is the question of American naval bases in the Pacific which will be brought up [illegible] or informally.

[illegible] is the north end of the [illegible] of Saghalien, which strategically protects the Sea of Japan and [illegible] believed to contain oil of which Japan is so short. The south part of this island belongs to Japan, since the war with Russia and the [illegible] belongs to Russia but has [illegible] overrun by the Japanese.

[illegible] psychology the Chinese are [illegible] mistake of [illegible] They [illegible] the whole conference [illegible] of the Republican [illegible] that for this purpose a [illegible] will be sufficient so that what [illegible] Mr. Hughes [illegible] afford to give in [illegible] China.

In my opinion [illegible] widespread Japanese impression [illegible] leaves out of account [illegible] the firmness of Secretary Hughes and the sincere desire of the [illegible] as many world [illegible] at this time as he possibly can.

[illegible] Chinese put out a very long [illegible] foreign troops in China, which is exactly the same statement [illegible] before the [illegible] in 1919. It is merely a historical [illegible] of how the foreign troops came [illegible] the various parts of China, followed by the Chinese reasons for [illegible] the troops ought now to be withdrawn. The Chinese hold that not only is the presence of the troops [illegible] but that they cause [illegible] rather than prevent them.

Japan on the other hand bases her [illegible] of troops in Manchuria [illegible] on treaty rights but on the [illegible] need of protecting the railway [illegible] mounted bandits.

FIRM ON MANCHURIA.

She makes a difference between Manchuria and Shantung standing pat on the former apparently forever, but saying that her guards along the Shantung railway will be withdrawn "as soon as China shall have notified her that Chinese police force has been duly organized and is ready to take over the charge of the railway protection."

As to Hankow, the Japanese say they have been "looking forward to an early opportunity of effecting complete withdrawal of the Hankow garrison. They must be assured, however, that China will immediately take effective measures for the [illegible] of peace and order [illegible] the protection of foreigners [illegible] she will fully assume [illegible] for the damage [illegible] or may have been done to foreigners."

FIVE ARRESTS FOR BROOKLYN CRASH

New York, Dec. 1.—Five sub-contractors were held [illegible] charge of homicide as a result of [illegible] the New American [illegible] in course of construction in [illegible] which resulted in the death of seven men and injury of a score. The sub-contractors were charged with using inferior materials. A workman named [illegible] O'Neil was still missing. It was believed his body was still beneath the [illegible] Police and firemen continued their search among the wreckage.

TEN HUNTERS KILLED IN 20 DAYS IN MICHIGAN

Detroit, Dec. 1.—Ten hunters lost their lives in Michigan during the twenty days' deer season. Two others are reported missing. A score were wounded. These hunting casualties bring the total for the year to twenty-two. The proportionate death rate for the 1921 season exceeded that of any recent year, owing to the smaller number of hunters. It is estimated that more than 20,000 persons participated in the hunting and 4,000 deer were killed.

FIFTY MILLIONS YEARLY SAVING FOR ROADS

U. S. Board Will Effect It by Reclassifying Work of Employes

By Universal Service.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Fifty million dollars a year will be saved to the railroads of the country by a decision [illegible] the United States Railroad Labor Board, according to [illegible]. The decision [illegible] and affects approximately [illegible].

The board members believe the decision is the most important work by the board to date," said Harper Leech, secretary to the board. "It is designed to provide a permanent code of shop rules to stabilize that part of the railroad industry."

Eight unions are affected by the decision, all affiliated with the railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor.

RECLASSIFIES LABOR.

They are the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Iron Forgers and Helpers, International Alliance of Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers, International Association of Machinists, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers, and International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The bulk of the changes from the old national agreement as outlined in the decision are changes in the classification of work to be performed by the various crafts. These classifications are made more liberal.

The board found that work not requiring skill was assigned to high paid skilled workers. Work that could frequently be performed by common labor had to be done by an expert. In other words a $1 a day man was doing work that could have been done by a $3 a day man. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved by this change. For example:

BANS CLOSED SHOP.

Machinists engaged in repair work may connect or disconnect wiring or pipe connections to repair machinery without waiting to call an electrician or sheet metal worker.

The principle of collective bargaining and union recognition embodied in the transportation act is retained, but representation of minorities in grievance cases is provided for, thus doing away with that part of the recent agreement criticized as forcing the closed shop."

DAUGHTERS OPEN FIGHT ON TROWBRIDGE

Contest for the $100,000 estate left by Mrs. Flora A. Trowbridge of Franklin, is scheduled to begin today before Judge Hall and a jury in Dedham court. Mrs. [illegible] Kingsbury of Chicago and her daughter [illegible] Mrs. Aileen Jones are the contestants. According to the will the property was left to George [illegible], for years superintendent of the Trowbridge piano factory. Mrs. [illegible], widow of Mrs. Trowbridge's brother, claims that [illegible] used undue influence, and that Mrs. Trowbridge was of unsound mind.

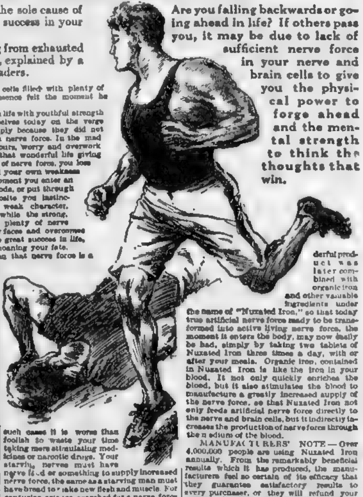
Why Men With Strong Nerve Force Dominate Others—

And Fill the Important Positions in Life

Weak Nerve Force is often the sole cause of chronic ill health and lack of success in your undertakings.

How to tell if you are suffering from exhausted Nerve Force and what to do, explained by a physician for the benefit of readers.



Are you falling backwards or going ahead in life? If others pass you, it may be due to lack of sufficient nerve force in your nerve and brain cells to give you the physical power to forge ahead and the mental strength to think the thoughts that win.

A man, who keeps his nerve and brain cells filled with plenty of nerve force, makes his over-mastering presence felt the moment he enters a room.

Countless numbers of men, who started in life with youthful strength and vigor, determined to win, find themselves today on the verge of a physical and nervous breakdown, simply because they did not keep their nerve and brain cells filled with nerve force. In the mad race for success, they have allowed long hours, worry and overwork to drain from their nerve and brain cells that wonderful life giving fluid called "Nerve Force." Without plenty of nerve force, you lose your magnetism, force and courage, you feel your own weakness and others know that you are weak. The moment you enter an office to apply for a position, or try to sell goods, or put through a business deal of any kind, the man opposite you instinctively feels and knows that you are a weak character, and you are therefore doomed to failure, while the strong, courageous forceful, magnetic man, with plenty of nerve force in his nerve and brain cells, successfully faces and overcomes every obstacle and difficulty and goes on to great success in life, while you may sit, a nervous weakling, bemoaning your fate.

Medical science and chemistry have proven that nerve force is a distinct substance, similar to your blood. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result, all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back, one person thinks he has kidney trouble; another may think his spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck, leads another to think he is going to have paresis, and from the disagreeable fulness or pressure in the front of his head another feels he is going to die from high blood pressure. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nervo-vital fluid, because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it, but in every case your nerve force is your capital in life, and when it [illegible] your capital is gone, the same as if you [illegible] or squandered your capital in business. [illegible] you lack nerve force, there is only one thing [illegible] going to help you, and that is more [illegible]. In such cases it is worse than foolish to waste your time taking mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. Organic iron, contained in Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of the nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

TOURNAMENT GOLF PLAY REAL TEST TO GET TRUE LINE ON GAME

By JOCK HUTCHISON

"What's the matter with my game?" asks a [illegible] "I [illegible] fairly [illegible] on approach and putt; [illegible] use [illegible] and the irons as well as my [illegible], but [illegible] I have [illegible] tournaments [illegible] season [illegible] I was beaten by golfers who do not play as well as [illegible]."

[illegible] I recall what Walter J. Travis said to me a few [illegible] ago. After [illegible] to America his game began to [illegible]

Grid Teams of East Shy on Taking Trip to Coast

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 1.—California's champion football team wants to play in an East vs. West game New Year's Day, but as no big Eastern eleven seems anxious to journey West, an opponent has not yet been named.

San Diego, Cal., has Centre College, conqueror of Harvard, signed for a game, but has no opponent, and there is talk that California may make up the deficiency.

[illegible] I should have taken a [illegible] rest.

I have answered my correspondent's question partly in saying that loss of enthusiasm or keenness and the fact that a golfer gradually tightens up his swing as he grows older, is often responsible for one's game fading, but this is not everything.

If one is a poor match player [illegible] influenced by the opponent's [illegible]

This was of course medal play and [illegible] match but it was [illegible] the same. Ouimet had scored low over the Brookline course and he knew [illegible] Everyone [illegible] the famous [illegible]

Some golfers who [illegible] will find that they are [illegible] shorter distance from the tee [illegible] are not hitting the ball with [illegible] confidence they once had. Loss of confidence makes a golfer press [illegible] at the ball in trying to get a little extra distance.

Patience is the best remedy I know of. Few take advantage of this [illegible]. If one will take the time to wait for his club head to come through on each shot he will not [illegible] to find his game slipping back.

Sevens and eights are the [illegible] of a lot of medal rounds. They happen to the best of us [illegible] Play the next one as if your [illegible] shot had been all that you [illegible] After a bad shot one's mind should be free from worry [illegible] demands the closest concentration.

Says Some Women Wear So Many Gold Rings It's Hard to Tell Whether They're Wearing Jewelry or Brass Knuckles

[illegible] tells us that jewelry is a relic of barbarism. If this is true then there are a lot of savages walking up and down Tremont street.

In the olden days a person would go wild over a little piece of glass. They do the same today, only they don't know it's glass.

In those times the more jewelry they had the wilder they got. To day you've got to give them jewelry to tame them.

And when you see the jewelry that some women wear they must have been awfully wild.

[illegible] is just as much [illegible] age as it was years ago.

If you don't believe it try and become engaged to a girl without giving her a ring.

Some women wear so many gold rings you can't tell whether they're wearing jewelry or brass knuckles.

Pearls can't live unless they're worn so often around somebody's neck because they have to feed on human flesh. A lot of us would be glad to take in a few pearl necklaces as boarders.

Still, some necks are so scrawny it's a wonder the pearls don't starve to death.

Maybe pearls do have to eat, but nobody ever heard that Tiffany [illegible] running a restaurant.

You go in there and buy a string of pearls and the YOU can't eat.

In the olden days the savages used to wear rings around their neck. A lot of men do the same thing today.

There [illegible] excuse for the savages [illegible] they didn't [illegible]

The only way they could remove the rings from their neck was with a chisel. We use a wash rag.

[illegible] give a girl a [illegible] she was yours [illegible] jewelry today and somebody [illegible]

A few hundred years ago you had to have a whole lot of brass to get by. You need more of it today.

In those times a girl would give you her answer and you'd give her a ring. Now you've got to give her a ring before she'll give you her answer.

After a savage got a few ornaments he'd go out and talk to anybody. When a person gets a little jewelry today they talk to nobody.

PICK HARVARD FOOTBALL CAPTAIN TODAY

Harvard's football captain for 1922 will be elected today, when the players who took part in the Yale game sit for a group photograph.

Twenty-five players will be eligible to vote, including Janin, as it is planned to get the members of the athletic committee on the telephone to informally approve the recommendation of the Student Council that he be added to the "H" members of the team.

There are two outstanding candidates for the captaincy, George Owen, Jr., of Newton and [illegible] Charles Buell of Hartford, Ct. Buell was the quarterback primarily responsible for Harvard's success the past two seasons.

Owen proved a big factor likewise in Harvard's play the past two years. He is a strong line plunger and capable defence man. Late this season he also showed efficiency in drop kicking. He can play any of the three back positions and do it well.

Owen is captain of the hockey team and if he plays the same sort of baseball with Jack Slattery next Spring that he did last Summer he will be eligible for another captaincy.

That fact may swing a number of votes to Buell, who is every whit as popular as Owen is.

The contest should be a close one.

The Harvard Club of Boston has decided to take recognition of the success of the eleven and will give the players a banquet on December 16. The committee in charge plans to make the affair one of the most notable ever given to a Crimson football team and among those to whom invitations will be sent are [illegible] Lowell, the Board of Overseers, directors of the Alumni Asso[illegible] former members of Varsity [illegible] teams. The dinner will be held [illegible] Harvard Hall and will be open to all under-graduates.

Next Saturday afternoon the Stoughton Catholic Club and the Trojans of Roxbury will clash at the Old Town Field, Abington. As neither team has met a defeat this season, the fans on the South Shore are due to break a record for attendance at this game.

Numbered among the Stoughton lineup are several college stars. The Trojans will present [illegible] lineup of youngsters that has [illegible] New England football [illegible] wonderful record for the past [illegible] seasons campaigning on [illegible] New England gridirons. In five seasons they were defeated only once.

HOLY CROSS PLAYERS GET GOLD FOOTBALLS

Each player who participated in the Boston College game will be presented a gold football.

The annual novice swimming meet at Williams College, for undergraduates except those who have won varsity insignia or first [illegible] in former years, will be held in [illegible] gymnasium, from December [illegible] December 16.

JANIN GETS FOOTBALL LETTER FROM HARVARD

Janin, first string [illegible] Crocker and Macomber, but prevented from playing against [illegible] of an injury received in the Brown game, will be given his letter.

The Athletic Committee Monday night referred the petition of the football team that Janin be so honored to the Student Council for investigation and recommendation. The Council passed favorably on the suggestion.

Janin has already two letters for baseball and is now a candidate for the varsity hockey team.

HOLY CROSS WILL PLAY HARVARD OCT. 7, 1922

Worcester, Dec. 1.—Holy Cross will meet Harvard again on the gridiron in 1922. Although the Crimson schedule has not been announced, the Worcester team will appear in the Harvard Stadium on October 7.

NEWTON STILL HOPEFU[illegible] OF FORCING RIVALS INTO GRID BATTLE

By FRED C. LANE.

Newton High is insistent that Haverhill High show its cards on the table. Dr. Martin, faculty manager of Newton, is still dickering with the authorities at the Shoe City to try to arrange the game on some local field, possibly Fenway Park. The clear weather yesterday with the promise of the weather man of similar conditions for the next three days, would make Fenway Park an ideal spot for this battle.

Headmaster Clow, acting for the Haverhill team, refuses to play the contest on neutral ground. Since the home field is impassable, Newton High will have an undisputed claim to the State title.

* * *

It is a known fact that Haverhill tried to call off the contest as early as Monday, and in the opinion of Coach Dickinson of Newton High, "sees the handwriting on the wall." Every available means will be used by the Newton authorities to get Haverhill on the same playing field with the Orange and Black players.

Newton's team of 1921 is by far superior to that of last year's eleven and will no doubt upset that long list of wins that Haverhill values so highly.

Down the North Shore League the wildest of tales are going the rounds. Coach Bill Joyce, who so successfully piloted many of Lynn Classical athletic teams to the front, made a hurry trip down Baltimore way over the holiday. Judging from the talk of those familiar with the situation he will leave this locality for parts unknown.

This has been forecast [illegible] because of the fine record that [illegible] Joyce made while the leader at the Lynn school. Not in years has Malden had such fine representation on the gridiron, and the fans and friends realize this [illegible] judging from the send-off. A new backfield will have to be built from the material that reports next Fall. The three stars of the charging [illegible] Lewin, Upham and Sandberg will be lost to the squad through graduation. One star that will cause a great gap in the ranks is Captain Albert Butler, who is rated as the best schoolboy end turned out in Malden.

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 1.—An offer of a football game with Yale in 1922, just prior to the Princeton game, was received today by athletic officials of Iowa University, champions of the Western conference this year. The communication from New Haven said the date would be held open for Iowa's decision.

MALONE SAYS A PUNCH IS THE REAL THING

BY JACK CONWAY

"Knock out your opponents if you want to convince the the world you are a regular person!"

Jock Malone, celebrated St. Paul middleweight, made this statement as calmly as Briand told the noble diplomats at Washington that France was going to keep as many fighting men in the field as it believed it needed.

"The fans like a fellow with a punch more than anybody else," continued Malone. "That is why Jack Dempsey is so popular. When the heavyweight champion hits his opponent, the fans start for the exits.

"When I started boxing out in St. Paul under the direction of Mike Gibbons, I developed a winning punch. I also mastered scientific boxing. These two assets have enabled me to smash my way to the front ranks of my boxing division.

• • •

"Boston fans saw me box and punch in my contests here with Reed, Gans and Bogash. They will only see me punch when I battle Reed for the second time at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night.

"Not that I couldn't stand off and outbox the Natick Sunday school teacher. But that's not my plan. Everybody around New England seems to think that the only way to beat Reed is by boxing him. The wise boys say Pal is too strong and rugged for anybody to risk a stand up battle with him. Well, you can tell the world that I'm going to fight Reed tomorrow night. None of the clever stuff for mine. I'm going to try for a knockout.

• • •

"As I said before, when you rock your opponents to sleep they put you out front in the dear old fistic parade. May I be successful in my campaign of destruction."

• • •

Reed, very naturally, isn't worrying a great deal about Malone's plans. Pal recently trounced Louis Bogash and is fighting better than at any time during his hectic ring career. He realizes Malone is a tidy performer but believes nevertheless that there will be cause for joy in Natick tomorrow night.

• • •

The semi-final between Johnny Sheppard and Barney McIntee for the flyweight championship of New England has created more interest than any match between small men that has been in the making for a long while. Sheppard's string of victories has created a lot of talk among the close followers of the game, because they think he has the makings of another Kid Goodman. His manager, Paddy Minnehan, who also had Goodman, says Sheppard's style of fighting is the same as Goodman's was in the days when the latter was Sheppard's weight.

The other two fights between Denny Glynn of Roxbury and Micky Kirst of St. Paul and Buff Ivers of East Boston and Young Jimmy Gardner of Quincy will usher in a good evening's entertainment.

The club's office at No. 28 School street, Room 13, will be open from 9 in the morning till 6 at night.

A classy card of amateur bouts has been arranged by Matchmaker Al Lacey of the Riverton A. C. for its boxing show in the Chelsea Theatre Saturday evening. In addition to the 108, 125 and 145 pound open classes, the novices will be given a special opportunity to show in the 115 pound novice class. This will afford inexperienced boxers an opportunity to be matched with others also inexperienced and not pitted against the high class amateurs.

• • •

Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight king, will try to win the by the K.O. route tomorrow night at Mechanics Hall, Worcester, over Roy Moore of St. Paul, Minn. Moore and Friedman have boxed two slashing ten-round bouts, each winning a decision.

• • •

Willie Harmon, the boy who won a decision over Patsy Bogash, is ready and willing to meet Moe Levy's champ Terry Brooks. All the newsboy manager will have to do is to get some club to stage the match and Harmon will guarantee to give Brooks a fine pasting.

Young Bova, the West End bantamweight, wants to meet Johnny Sheppard, Paddy Minnahan's champion, on a winner take all basis. Bova always gives satisfaction while in the ring.

• • •

Jack Savage is waiting for Hambone Kelly to get a club to stage their return match. Kelly has been demanding a return match and also has said he has a club to stage it. Savage is still waiting for an offer from any of the club promoters.

• • •

Johnny Clinton, since he won back the New England lightweight crown has had many offers to box at different clubs throughout New England. The new champion will be ready to accept the best one in about a week's time. He would like nothing better than to meet Johnny Dundee, Willie Jackson or Rocky Kansas.

• • •

After an illness of several months, Bobby Josephs, former New England featherweight champion, is ready to re-enter the ring. In his last bout, Josephs met with an injury to his eye and upon the advice of his physician has been doing no boxing. Now, however, the eye is entirely healed and Josephs has been training for weeks in anticipation of regaining his title lost to Al Shubert about six months ago.

• • •

His manager, Mike Carr, is willing to match him with any of the feathers who have held the title or the present holder, Chick Suggs. Since Josephs relinquished the crown, it has changed hands so many times that it is almost impossible to keep track of the holder from day to day. Josephs will take on Elkins, Shubert, Domers or any other featherweight in the game and feels confident that when he regains his title it won't be used as a football as has been the case since he lost it to Shubert.

GOLFERS TAKE UP NEW PLAN FOR GAMES

Move to Limit Entries in Tournaments to Allow Finish of Rounds Daily

New York, Dec. 1.—Discussion of means for limiting entries in tournaments of the Professional Golfers' Association, so that qualifying rounds of thirty-six holes may be played off in a single day is expected to occupy attention of the association's national executive committee at its meeting here December 15.

The time of year for the contest and other conditions also will be considered, because of expressed dissatisfaction over this year's event, played in midsummer over an eighteen-hole course.

Among those who are expected to attend the meeting are:

George Sargent, Scioto Country Club, Columbus, Ohio, president of the P. G. A.; Jack Mackie, Inwood Country Club, Inwood, L. I.; Jack Hobens, Huntington Valley Country Club, Noble, Pa.; George McLean, Grassy Sprain Country Club, Bronxville, N. Y.; Wilfred Reid, Wilmington (Del.) Country Club, Alex Pirie, Chicago; E. R. Anderson, Lawrence Park Country Club, Bronxville; Willie Ogg, Worcester (Mass.) Country Club, and C. R. Lager, California.

LEONARD PANS N. Y. BOXING COMMISSION

Refuses to Box in That State Until Competent Men Are Made Judges

New York, Dec. 1.—Benny Leonard has made himself a lot of new friends by his frank and open statement concerning boxing in New York State. He gave one of the best and most comprehensive interviews ever given out—and he talked straight from the shoulder, as he hits, and he carried a knockout punch in every paragraph.

Leonard explains that he will not box in New York because of the system of judging bouts and giving decisions. He simply refuses to place his title in jeopardy by permitting judges who are inexperienced or worse to decide matches. He says that the New York system of decisions is all wrong.

Also he takes a smash at the gambling evil which has grown to be such a menace to the sport. He says that frequently 4 to 1 is offered on fights that should be even money affairs, and that the betting seldom goes wrong.

He simply states what every follower of boxing in New York knows; that a lot of rough stuff has been pulled and is being pulled and that the system of selecting judges makes these sure thing clean-ups possible. He probably will get himself in bad with the New York Athletic Commission—but perhaps he already was in that condition, and doesn't care.

At any rate, if a few more of the leading boxers would talk right out as Leonard and Mike Gibbons do, the powers that are getting away with the rough stuff would lose out and the sport be saved from them.

It is a rather odd thing that New York should have so much scandal and trouble over boxing and Wisconsin be in such good condition. The New York law, on the surface, is as good or better than that of Wisconsin, and in part it was copied after the Wisconsin law.

AN APPEAL TO SPORTS

By NICK FLATLEY

THIS is what you might call an open letter to the generous hearted. You are requested to contribute to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund.

You know this fund; know that it is a 100 per cent. charity that sprinkles more joy about Boston, when joy is needed, than anything else ever could.

Real happiness is brought into thousands of homes that otherwise would not know Christmas from any other day of the drab and dismal year.

A Christmas dinner blots out the shadow of poverty and the despair of unemployment. It makes the mothers of the poor happy, and God knows very few smiles of joy light up their gaunt faces.

THE Boston American sporting department has started a little fund of its own, to help along the grand general cause. Circulating as we do among the red blooded citizens who make up our sporting population, we know that many open hearts beat beneath the vests that flutter when Babe Ruth knocks a homer, or George Owen tears down a clean cut gridiron, or Jack Dempsey bowls over some alien pretender for his crown.

We know, too, that our sport lovers annually make up a big part of the huge sum that spreads the cheeriness on December 25. But we believe that the sport donations deserve a separate classification. We know that if the matter is put up as a sporting proposition, the response is likely to be the greater.

SPORTING departments in the other Hearst papers have handled their own section of the fund for the past couple of years, and made huge successes. We have an idea that our Boston friends will help to put this initial effort over in true Boston fashion.

Wherefore, we ask you to send in your bit to the Sporting Editor, who doesn't care in the least how big or how little it may be. He just wants to have everybody represented. We told him that every real sport in this part of the world would be, and now it's up to you to make good for us.

IN the course of a year, the sporting pages help quite a few individuals. Baseball and football clubs get games through free notices; fighters sign up for bouts and so on. Now you have a chance to reciprocate and help us along a bit.

Could everyone of you be present in this office on the days as Christmas approaches and hear the piteous appeals from the steady file of ragged and suffering applicants: could you but glimpse the happiness when some wretched applicant knows that Christmas will not be one of the hungry days for the little family, this appeal would be unnecessary.

Most of the askers are women; most of them ask us to help children. There is something peculiarly sad and poignant in the thought of a kid suffering. A grown person can take the bumps, and not expect too much sympathy. But a youngster is entitled to some sort of a square deal in the opinion of the heart of every normal being.

Contributing to this fund is helping the children of the poor, and cherishing the Christmas dreams that every youngster has.

SO join the movement. Send in something to Sporting Editor of the Boston American. It will do somebody else good, and will do you more good. There's a glorious glow to the feeling that you have helped somebody else to be happy while you've been enjoying yourself. The list of contributors and their gifts will be published on the sport pages of the American.

WHEN IS A FALL NOT A FALL? MAT MEN ASK

Wrestling Experts All Excited Over Ruling in Lewis-Zbyszko Title Match

New York, Dec. 1.—When, New York professional [illegible] amateur wrestlers are [illegible] a fall not a fall? And [illegible] question [illegible] answered [illegible] of [illegible] want to know [illegible] the scheme of things [illegible] for the "flying fall" and the "rolling fall."

The open forum on the rules [illegible] was opened to all comers Monday night when Ed (Strangler) Lewis fell victim to a best two out of three of these somewhat academic tumbles as demonstrated by Stanislaus Zbyszko.

Yesterday the old-timers joined in the controversy. The [illegible] George Bothner, [illegible] follows:

"The flying fall and the rolling fall were never part of professional wrestling in my day and have been over a stretch of [illegible] years.

"Mr. [illegible] they were legitimate falls in [illegible] day but I never heard of them [illegible] as part of the scheme of things in amateur wrestling.

"They do not belong to professional wrestling, and, if forced on us, will kill the game."

BURKETT LAUDS MATTY AS BEST OF PITCHERS

Great Slugger Couldn't Hit "Big Six," Although He Had Wonderful Eye

Jess Burkett, who now aids in handling the New York Giants, never will be convinced that there ever was or ever will be a pitcher as good as was Christy Mathewson, who now lies ill, fighting tuberculosis at Saranac. Burkett was one of the greatest hitters the game ever knew, a man who hit hard against any pitching, was always dangerous and who was rated above .300 before the season started.

In fact the majority of pitchers would have compromised with him on one hit in three times up.

"There was one bird I never could hit," Burkett remarked recently. "And that was Matty. He had me stopped. I don't know why, but I never could hit him, even when the others said he had nothing."

Matty, reminiscent as he sat in his chair at Saranac, laughed over the recollection. "I remember," he said. "Jess was easy for me. I never could quite understand it, but he couldn't hit when I was pitching, although I do not remember pitching any harder to him or any differently from the way I worked with other batters. He simply couldn't hit."

An examination of the records was made by Al Munroe Elias, the statistician, to find how Burkett really hit against Matty. His batting average against old 'Big Six' was 166.

Greenewalt Tech Manager

Crawford H. Greenewalt has been selected by the M. I. T. A. A. as manager of the Technology varsity basketball squad. The position was left vacant by R. S. Mahaffy, who left the institute. Greenewalt successfully managed the boxers last season and he was given the preference over a number of other aspirants.

MAY FREEZE OUT KILBANE IN TITLE BOUT SERIES

By JACK VEIOCK

New York, Dec. 1.—A campaign that may bring the long dormant featherweight division of boxing to life was launched here today. Tex Rickard, peer of boxing promoters, and Tommy McGinty of Cleveland, new manager of Danny Frush, signed an agreement calculated to start the ball a rolling.

McGinty, who promoted the championship bout between Kilbane and [illegible] last September, has booked his [illegible] with Rickard for a series of [illegible] in Madison Square Garden against [illegible] best featherweights available [illegible] eventually, to force [illegible] return match.

Danny Frush is the uncrowned [illegible] champion by rights [illegible] today. Pictures of his [illegible] Kilbane show plainly that [illegible] deliberately fouled [illegible] in the first round, and [illegible] laws of boxing Frush should have taken the title then and there on a foul.

• • •

Be that as it may, all Frush asks is a fair chance to prove he is entitled to the championship. I have signed with Mr. Rickard for four fights, which we hope will lead to a return match with Kilbane.

I have asked promoter Rickard to get the best featherweights available from Kilbane down, for Frush fears no one in his division.

• • •

According to McGinty, Kilbane has demanded $100,000 of Rickard for defending his title in the garden with [illegible] not to meet [illegible]. FIGURE SKATING AT ARENA OPENING

Races and Fancy and Eccentric Exhibitions on Ice Runners Also on Bill

Barrel jumping, a burlesque hockey match, speed races and fancy and figure skating will be on the bill at the opening of the Arena Saturday night. Manager George V. Brown has arranged an attractive program.

In fact, Brown asserts that never in the history of indoor skating in the world has a rink been so well favored with such an extensive program. Lovers of fancy, figure, eccentric and comedy work on runners will have their fill.

Manager Brown has combed the country for the best talent and the bill will introduce men and women of great skating merit, five of them title holders in this country.

Bobby McLean, Sherwin Badger, Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard, [illegible] Lamy, Evelyn Chandler and Bert [illegible] all [illegible] in their own specialty. George Muller and his wife, formerly Miss Leah Creger, Willie Frick and his sister, Gretna; Bert Larrabee, formerly associated with Charlotte, and a host of other stars on the steel runners, will contribute to the entertainment.

It is the skating bill of the century. Manager Brown is arranging to handle 8,000 fans for the great opening.

NO PRO. FOOTBALL GAME IN BOSTON ON SATURDAY

The professional football game, which was billed for Braves Field Saturday, has been indefinitely postponed. It will not be played this season, not in Boston. The Buffalo and Canton Bulldogs may play in some city or town or hamlet but not here.

The promoters assert that there was a $500 hold-up at the last moment before train time out West. The demand was considered unfair, but the promoter heeded it as a warning and called the game off.

Why be particular when the supply was so plentiful? No one looked for consideration from Mr. Blatzky, so no one was disappointed.

Mrs. Birdsong, who treasured the memory of the days in the country before her impractical husband wandered into the whirlpool of New York and died there after being buffeted by the current too strong for him, had some misgivings about her daughter's working in the flower factory, but food was needed, and to buy food money is imperative; rent money is [illegible] Jimmie was wear[illegible] of a messenger boy [illegible] they managed to bring [illegible] enough to tide them over from week to week.

Unfortunately Mrs. Birdsong could do [illegible] had told her long ago that her heart was [illegible] way; she had felt those acute pains more and more frequently as the months rolled on and their message was plain. It was fortunate that Mrs. Birdsong could not see the interior of the factory where her daughter toiled: Enoch Arden discovered that things seen are mightier than things heard. Mrs. Birdsong would have discovered that things seen are a thousand times more terrible than things heard when those things are bad to begin with.

Essie having little else to talk about, spent her spare time discussing her co-workers.

One woman brought a baby with her and held the child in her lap while she worked; Blatzky by paying her less than the others put up with a few infantile protests in the way of crying, but the mother kept on toiling, shifting the baby's position and crooning a strange melody that sounded like a dirge.

WON BY MOTHER LOVE

AN EXPERIMENT THAT DID GREAT GOOD

By W. A. McKeever

A WIDOW [illegible] and with a nine-year-old child suddenly received a most cheering inspiration to go into a poor district of her home city and there found a modest community centre.

No funds were available for this worthy project, simply the need of the poor, the vision as to service and the eternal mother-love in a good, womanly heart as the moving power. An old ramshackle residence building was obtained for a nominal sum and renovated, all work being donated. Two humble women were given lodgings there as caretakers.

Well-to-do people were invited to bring in used garments and household articles to be [illegible] and sold at low cost. [illegible] mothers were asked to come for mending parties. Finally the entire house was bulging with valuable articles, many of them as good as new.

Now came the service. Mothers of various nationalities streamed to the place all day to be met as guests and purchasers of the non-inspired articles, to be asked about their families, and to become acquainted with one another. There followed mother classes in home cooking, in household health and sanitation, in the care and feeding of children. HER OWN WAY

"WHAT made you think him dead?" she asked faintly.

"Because I met a man who knew him and who saw him after he was dead. He was killed in an accident."

"Oh, no!" [illegible] ejaculated. "That [illegible]"

But the [illegible] man was too intent on the story now to heed her protest.

"He was killed instantly in an automobile accident," Daniel Sloane [illegible] "The night that the accident occurred his only companion [illegible] a fellow who had been with him during the past two years, stole from Dan some of the firm's money. He exchanged clothes with [illegible] taking papers, etc., from his pockets, then had the body buried under his own name in a little village cemetery, posing himself as the boy's nearest of kin. "The firm thought the forgery [illegible] Dan [illegible] wrote me of it. I refunded the money and hushed the matter up. Several months passed before they suspected foul play. Dan's pal had [illegible] all Dan's habits, his connections, etc. He had forged [illegible] name in a confession to his employer in which he said that I would pay back the stolen money.

"Nobody knows where the scoundrel is now. But he made others besides myself think that Dan had absconded. I cannot forgive myself."

"Are you sure all this is true?" The question was barely audible.

[illegible] "I do not want to horrify you but I left no stone unturned to ascertain the [illegible] I had the body [illegible] I knew of a scar on D[illegible] injury. A [illegible] bone had to be removed when he was a tiny chap, so that he walked [illegible] The scar was [illegible]

It haunted [illegible] of how I had misjudged my own flesh and blood, the little lad I used to see out West—my brother's son—whom I had loved when he was a tiny child. I was miserable about it all.

"That was why I wrote to you. I wanted to make amends to you before it was too late.

"I made a horrible mistake with Dan. Perhaps if I had been gentler with him when he wrote to me again and again he might have confided more in me.

"He wanted his own way. I wanted him to settle down and go to college—and because he would not I wrote him some cruel letters. He wanted to come East to see me a year ago and I forbade it.

"And then—he was killed."

Greatly Distressed

"Why, Helen, child, what is the matter? I did not mean to shock you by telling you all these facts. But I felt that I must explain—that I had been wrong, that another man—not Dan—had been the thief."

"Yet, while it is all dreadful it is not as if you had known your cousin. He was never in Slateville since your babyhood. You can have no recollection of him."

"Wait! Let me think, please!" the girl begged. "Forgive me. I will explain—if you will only wait. But, you see, I do not quite understand your story."

"No wonder," the man said gently. "I told it in a bungling way! But I did not suppose you had taken so to heart what I said about Dan and his father—and all that—the last time I saw you. What I said then has troubled me, too. I was unnecessarily cruel. I deceived myself into thinking that I was warning you to be careful. But you are not the kind of girl to need such warning. I see that now."

"Wait!" she began again. "Let me think!"

PREMATURE OLD LOOKS

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

PREMATURE old age is believed to be due to early degeneration of certain glands of the body, notably the thyroid, but premature old looks is another matter—in large part a matter of habit.

For example, not drinking enough water is one of the faulty habits which makes people look old before they should. Many women will drink a cup of tea or coffee for breakfast and then drink but little thereafter because of a fear that water causes fatness.

By drinking water between meals any tendency to obesity will be avoided, while at the same time the tissues of the face will not lack the necessary amount of fluids which make the countenance look human, instead of lean, haggard, wrinkled and shrivelled.

The lined faces of many young women are frequently due to such lack of water. Their poor complexions are due to poisonous products which are not washed out because of the lack of fluids. Their worried looks are due to nervous tensions because of the deleterious effects of the same poisonous products upon the nervous system.

Gray hair, appearing prematurely, and falling of the hair are often due to the poor condition of the scalp, along with the rest of the skin, owing to the deprivation of water.

Another faulty habit causing premature old looks in young women is smoking, which produces its effects very rapidly. The effects of smoking are much more deleterious to women than to men.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Breaking an Engagement

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Last Christmas I became engaged to a girl one year my senior after going with her one year. Being only eighteen the July following my parents and also her father (she has no mother) objected somewhat. But both of us being headstrong, we overruled the [illegible] and intended to get married as soon as I became twenty-one.

About a month ago my family moved. Since then I began to see that I had made a big mistake and that what I had thought was love was only infatuation, as my mother had always said. As we had quarrelled before I moved over some trifle I did not see her since then nor did she telephone me. Then last week, after I had talked things over with my mother, I wrote her a letter and sent her ring and letters back. The next day she called me up and begged me to see her that night, and that she did not believe that I wanted to break the engagement, but that my mother did, and also added that if I would only see her again she was sure I would take everything back, etc.

Now, Miss Fairfax, how can she expect me to be engaged to her when I do not love her? I can't go back to see her because I am afraid that more out of pity than love I would do what she says and start all over again. And my mother does not want me to go with any girl until I am older and earn enough to support one. And I can see she is right, and that at the time I became engaged I was too blind to everything she [illegible] said or did.

A. M.

YOUR mother is right—as mothers have a way of being! No boy as young as you ought to try to choose his life mate. You have not matured from the point of view of knowing what you want or where you are going in the world. The girl is lonely and longs for companionship as much as she does for love. I know how desperate she feels at the thought of losing your friendship. She wants some one on whom to rely. But even if you were to sacrifice yourself and marry her, you couldn't make her happy. The thing to do is to find courage, go to see her and make her understand that you cannot undertake a man's burdens and responsibilities now. Be honest.

The One Girl

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am in love with a girl of my own age and I'm almost positive she loves me, but there are some other "chaps" much older than I who, when they come around, seem to capture all this girl's attentions and then she has a tendency to slight me.

EX SOLDIER

IF you feel the girl loves you, why can't you be generous enough to glory in her cleverness and to enjoy her popularity?

MRS. HAYDOCK SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Followed Advice of Her Druggist's Wife and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 21 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to anyone who wants a personal letter."—MRS. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved Mrs. Haydock from an operation we cannot claim that all operations may be avoided by it,—but many women have escaped operations by the timely use of this old fashioned root and herb medicine.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

"I don't believe that Wall Street ever reaches out to GET anyone," declared John N. Willys quite emphatically. "If Wall Street GETS anyone it is because he has placed himself in such a position that he lets Wall Street GET him. I have absolutely no kick coming on this score."

• • •

When I met Mr. Willys yesterday he showed no traces of the battle the financial powers-to-be are waging against him for having stolen a march on them by having receivers quietly appointed last Saturday afternoon for the Willys Corporation. I remarked upon this. Mr. Willys instantly replied:

"I am not fighting the bankers or anybody else. I'm fighting only for what I believe to be the best interests of the Willys Corporation creditors and security holders. I am doing my level best for them, and I am prepared to abide by the consequences."

Then he added with a smile: "I was able to make my own way moderately well in the world before I ever came to New York, and if the worst came to the worst, I think I can do it any time. I learned how to take hard knocks early in my career, and I think I still know how to be a good loser."

• • •

He smiled as he added: "But I am still very much in the ring and mean to stay in the ring as long as the stockholders of the different Willys Companies want me to represent them."

• • •

The battle for control of the operations of the Willys Corporation, under receivership, was advanced another stage yesterday when, on the application of counsel for the bankers and certain stockholders, Judge Knox named former Federal District Attorney Colonel Francis Caffey as a receiver for the Willys Corporation, following the appointment of two receivers at Toledo and in New York last Saturday friendly to Mr. Willys. The bankers' lawyers made certain charges against Willys' handling of certain important matters, as mentioned in this column yesterday. I asked Mr. Willys to tell me just why he had stolen a march on the bankers by precipitating a receivership last Saturday entirely unknown to the banking interests.

• • •

Mr. Willys replied that all effort to formulate a reorganization plan having fallen through, it was inevitable that certain creditors holding judgments against the Willys Corporation would have applied for receivers had he not done so. As he and his family own 80 per cent. of the common stock of the Willys Corporation, he felt that he had quite as much at stake as anyone else, to say the least. He felt it was extremely important to have as one of the receivers a practical operating man, thoroughly familiar with the management of the Autolite Company, the principal operating plant of the Willys Corporation and a real money maker; its net earnings for the coming year promised to approximate $3,000,000. Accordingly he recommended to the court in Toledo that one of his vice-presidents, Mr. Miniger, be made one of the receivers.

Mr. Willys added that he suggested to the judge that the naming of a second receiver be delayed until the banking interests could be consulted, but that the judge ruled that it was desirable to appoint a receiver at that time.

• • •

Mr. Willys was very emphatic in denying the statement made by bankers that he was a director or stockholder or officer or in any other way identified with the Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Company, which made the formal application for receivers and one of whose officers, Frank P. Kennison, was made a receiver.

Another point Mr. Willys was anxious to clear up was the insinuation that the Willys Corporation had paid an unduly high price for the $6,000,000 of stock of the Willys Overland Company. He explained that the Willys Overland Company was affected by the prolonged strike of its workers and that, like most other concerns, had become in need of funds. It owed the Willys Corporation some four million dollars and the latter held one-third of the stock of Willys Overland.

Accordingly it was to the interest of the Willys Corporation to co-operate with Willys Overland.

• • •

The price paid for the stock was $20 a share, which was less than the stock had been quoted at in the stock market when the deal was first taken up, and also less than the stock sold for in the month following completion of the deal. Moreover, the book value of the Willys Overland stock was then $30 a share. Mr. Willys emphasized the stock was paying dividends; earnings were averaging one million dollars a month and the outlook was good.

Mr. Willys declared that if the bankers would co-operate in working things out, he is absolutely sure that every bank loan can be met, every creditor paid in full, a satisfactory equity created for all stockholders. On the other hand, he intimated that the bankers should insist upon adopting different tactics. "The responsibility for the results will be up to them, not up to me."

• • •

The trouble with several conspicuous industrial and financial leaders who have fallen upon evil financial difficulties during the last eighteen months has been that they had indulged in extensive speculative activities on their own account and had become seriously involved. Mr. Willys, I understand, is in no such position. His activities were chiefly confined to his industrial operations, perhaps this is one reason why Mr. Willys has dared to throw down the gauntlet to the financial powers instead of signing anything they laid before him.

Interesting developments are promised.

RAILS FIRST IN AN UPWARD MOVEMENT

Steels and Equipments Advance, While Oils Improve During the Morning

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, gains being general during the second hour. Rails were leaders in the advance, while steels and equipments developed strength. Oils improved. Among issues to advance the most were General Cigar, Coca Cola, North American Co., Northern Pacific, Allied Chemical, Marine preferred, Sears Roebuck, Union Pacific and Standard Oil of New Jersey. They showed from one to four points gain. Mexican Petroleum was up a fraction after showing a point loss. Weak issues were International Paper and Beet Sugar. Morning transactions totaled 286,000 shares.

Call money opened at 5 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were higher. Demand sterling opened at $4.01½ and during the morning German marks advanced to .0052½.

IRREGULAR AT OPENING.

While irregularity characterized the price movement at the opening, the undertone was firm and most issues were above the closing figures for the preceding session. Covering was more of a factor than short selling. Rails and motors showed strength and oils were rather weak at the outset. The first hour trend was indecisive, but upward rather than downward. Issues to sell at year highs before mid-morning included General Cigars, Allied Chemical and Standard Oil of New Jersey. As a rule, early gains were small and so were losses. International Paper was exceptionally weak, sustaining the largest loss, while Standard Oil of New Jersey advanced the most. Mexican Petroleum began with a small gain, but soon reacted to a loss. Marine preferred moved up a couple of points before halting. Steels were quiet and mixed as to changes. Baldwin was the only active equipment and backed and filled within a narrow range. Highs for 1921 were established quickly by second, third and fourth Liberty issues.

EARNINGS HELP RAILS.

Reports that the Labor Board will rule for an open shop, and October earnings, were what made railroads the strongest group during the forenoon. Net of $106,000,000 for that month this year, against $86,455,000 for October, 1920, is indicated. Credit conditions are becoming more favorable for carriers, and it is likely that they will soon be borrowers for the large amounts needed for re-equipment and other purposes. It is believed that a rehabilitation of transportation will be a great factor in reviving business and industry. Increased borrowing demand for stocks after the close of the exchange yesterday is reported. International Harvester loaned at 1-64 premium, and Sears Roebuck at 1 1-28. Mexican Petroleum and American Sugar loaned flat. While the call rate stays up the monetary situation is getting easier. There is talk in financial districts that the Federal Reserve discount rate may be reduced to 4 per cent. before long. Withdrawals from New York banks by the government today will total $5,400,000.

FARMERS NEED HELP, SAYS SPILLANE

Vanderlip's Plans for Relieving Europe Discussed From Agricultural Viewpoint

By RICHARD SPILLANE

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—A lawyer in New York piled up a great fortune as advisor to money kings and princes of industry. He was the counsel of J. P. Morgan, the United States Steel Corporation and such. Some time ago he died.

Now his country estate, on which, it is said, he spent $3,000,000, has been sold for less than one-twelfth of that sum.

Philadelphia is to have the next annual convention of the Foreign Trade Council. The city will have to do well by the visitors if it comes up to the standard set by Cleveland last year or San Francisco the year before.

It should prepare to do better than the city by the lake or the one by the Golden Gate, for the men who make up the delegates to the council are worth cultivating.

DRAWS BUSY MEN.

James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, is president of the Foreign Trade Council. The convention usually attracts 1,000 or more men prominent in trade, industry and finance. And it draws men from foreign lands, too.

Mr. Vanderlip's proposal for the financial relief of European nations will not appeal particularly to the agriculturists of the South. The weekly publication of the University of North Carolina reports tenant farmers of the Carolinas and Georgia in sore distress. It tells of hundreds of men at railroad stations eager to go anywhere if they can get work enough to feed and clothe them.

Plans for abating the interest on Europe's debt to America or of calling the whole obligation of $10,000,000,000 or more off entirely, might have more weight generally if real attention were given to some of the necessary things in this country.

It is going to be very difficult for the South to raise a normal cotton crop next season unless the soil is fertilized thoroughly. The soil has not received in the last five years the amount of fertilization it requires.

FARMERS NEED AID.

The ravages of the boll weevil would not have been so great but for the drought and the weakness of the plant. The farmers of the South have little money. Most of them are in debt to their country merchants or the banks. Unless aid is extended to them they will not be able to buy fertilizers.

What is true of the agriculturist of the South is true also of the Middle Western and Southwestern farmer. That is the testimony of bankers. It will take one or two good crops at good prices to get the farmer out of debt.

Europe's problems concern not a few Americans much more than do those of this country. Those of Europe are grave indeed but that's no reason why American problems should not receive earnest attention also. There are enough of them to keep many able men busy. And if America is not kept strong how is she to lend strength to the others?

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Dec. 1.—Responding to weakness of Liverpool cables and early selling by Liverpool, the cotton market here opened barely steady at a net decline of 22 to 28 points. Weakness continued after the start, and at the end of fifteen minutes the list was heavy at a net loss of 30 to 31 points. The South was a seller, and local and Wall Street interests bought. There were twelve notices in circulation early. Opening prices were: December, 17.60; January, 17.45; March, 17.35; May, 17.06; July, 16.57.

Chicago Bond Bid Withdrawn

Chicago, Dec. 1.—An $8,000,000 bond issue offered by the city of Chicago two weeks ago to meet a deficit in the city's revenue in 1920 was taken from the market today when a lone bid was withdrawn. A syndicate headed by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York offered approximately $8.57 on the condition that the legality of the issue be approved within ten days. When this was not done the bid was withdrawn. New bids will be called for, Controller Harding announced.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Wheat opened ¼c to ⅝c lower corn was unchanged to ¼c higher; oats were unchanged to ⅛c higher. Opening prices were: Wheat—Dec., 1.13¼ to 1.13½; May, 1.17⅛ to 1.17¾. Corn—Dec., 47⅞ to 48; May, 54⅞ to 54⅝. Oats—Dec., 32⅜ to 32½; May, 38½ to 38⅝.

New York, Dec. 1.—The Curb market had a firm opening and prices for leading issues were: Philip Morris 4, off ⅛; Un. Ret. Candy, 5½; Simms 10⅞, up ⅛; Goodyear 12⅞, up ⅛; Anglo 21⅛, up ⅛; Imperial Oil of Canada 107, up 2½; Standard Oil of Indiana 87⅛, up ⅛.

London Market

London, Dec. 1.—The stock market was steady today. Consols, 49⅞; British war loan 3½s, 89½, up 1⅛; 5s, 88⅝; 4½s, 81⅞; 4s, 98⅝; French 5s, 34; Russian 5s, 8½; 4½s, 3⅛, off ½; 4s, 7⅛. Rio Tinto 26, up ⅛.

Coffee Quotations

New York, Dec. 1.—The coffee market had a firm opening, prices being: Dec., 8.50 to 8.75; March, 8.41 to 8.43; May, 8.26 to 8.28; July, 8.23 to 8.25; Sept., 8.20 bid.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW York, Dec. 1.—With the exception of isolated examples of strength among the rails and a few specialties, the general tone of Wednesday's stock market was again reactionary. Recessions were mostly of a fractional character with scattered examples of weakness here and there. International Paper, Davison Chemical and United Drug were weak, and Sears Roebuck again broke sharply, but recovered most of the loss before the close.

NORTHERN Pacific was the strongest of the rails, and the outstanding feature of the whole market, for that matter. Buying was based on expectations relating to the forthcoming dividend on the Burlington stock. Local anticipations have been somewhat inflamed by Chicago advices presaging an extra disbursement of a substantial character. There was a good demand for New Haven in early trading, but this stock reacted along with the rest of the market toward the close. Tobacco stocks were quite active, although their course was irregular with the exception of General Cigar, which advanced more than four points. Columbia Gas and Electric advanced to new high levels on the announcement of an advance in rates granted by the Cincinnati city council to its operating subsidary at that point.

FOREIGN exchanges were substantially higher, with sterling crossing 4.00 with francs and marks notably strong. The conferences in London with representatives of German financial interests furnished the explanation for the strength in all three of these currencies.

A SPECIAL meeting of the stockholders of the Haskell & Barker Co. has been called for January 4 in this city to approve the proposal of the Pullman Company to buy the former. It is understood the majority of the stock will be voted in favor of the sale.

DIRECTORS of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad will meet in Chicago today and declare the regular dividend of $5 per share and an extra dividend of $15 per share, according to authoritative sources in this city. Knowledge of this action was responsible for buying in Great Northern and Northern Pacific, which kept these stocks very strong in the face of a marked reactionary tendency elsewhere.

REPORTS have been prevalent for more than a week that inside selling was in progress in Mexican Pete. When the price broke 1⅛ Wednesday a number of stop loss orders were caught, resulting in a decline below 110. Short covering in the last half-hour forced an advance of nearly two points. The ostensible reason for the weakness in Mexican Pete was the announcement of additional export oil taxes. It is pointed out that these taxes are ad valorem imports on a sliding scale based on the price of crude oil at New York. The higher the price of oil, the higher the tax, and, consequently, in some market quarters it is taken as a bullish argument for, without prosperity, the Mexican government will receive none of this income.

DECEMBER 2, the members of the New York Cotton Exchange will vote to accept or reject the plans of the building committee for the contemplated new home of that organization. The plans call for the construction of an edifice which will not only house the exchange, but will provide office space. Estimates place the cost at approximately $4,000,000.

COLUMBIA GAS was one of the specialties which advanced in the face of declines in the general list. Large buying orders made their appearance on a report that the company has consummated a new contract with the approval of the authorities at Cincinnati, fixing the rate of natural gas at 50 cents a thousand feet for seven months in the year, and a sliding scale of from 50 to 65 cents per thousand feet for the other five months. This compares with the present rate of 35 cents.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER declined easily, pool support being conspicuous by its absence. Selling was induced by a report that prices for newsprint for the first quarter of 1922 would be much lower than present quotations, with correspondingly less profit to the company. A decline of more than three points was registered before any evidence of support was found.

TODAY there is due the interest on $10,000,000 convertible debenture gold 7s of the Atlantic Fruit Company. It was announced that this interest will not be paid.

THE same lack of support which was evident in Division Chemical Tuesdays, continued Wednesday, and sellers found bids for even hundred share lots from ½ to 1 point away from the previous sale. Not until the quotation had broken under 50 was there any evident demand for the stock. At the low price of the day a decline of more than 10 points had been recorded from its recent high.

FINDS COMFORT FOR GLOOMY DECEMBER

Evans Declares Last Month of Year May Not Be So Dark as Painted

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Investors and speculators passing over the line from November to December are walking in darkness and are liable to be so engaged throughout the entire last month of the year.

It is not so bad, for our financial eyes need rest from the glare of war and the flare of capital being burned up, though the latter process seems to have gone by in the past few months.

A well-known statistician of this city, who has kept a record of averages in stock transactions, which, on account of the careful selections and the substitution of active issues for those that have become inactive, probably represents 80 per cent. of the market, finds on his chart that there are only three years, 1903, 1909 and 1913, in the period from 1901 to 1920 inclusive, in which stocks have advanced during December and the rise in those cases was moderate.

ALLAYING CONDITIONS.

Applying this information to December, 1921, we must make proper allowance for the extreme decline from the latter part of 1919 to a few weeks ago and for many other conditions which will readily occur to a student of the subject.

One offset to the conclusion that December, 1921, is going to be like its weird sisters is noted by this statistician in the large amount of money that is to be let loose by the government on its interest obligations, to which might be added the immense sums on interest and dividend account that will come out in January. The largely liquidated condition of the market with which the public is now so familiar is an important element and it appears that the holdings of brokers have increased little during the period of rise we have had recently.

The head of a leading brokerage house in this city consulted his books and found out that the house is carrying scarcely 10 per cent. more stock than at the lowest point this year. In considerable degree this is no doubt accounted for by purchases in full by his customers and the placing of the stocks in their own boxes, which has been progress for many months and largely accounts for the strength in the security market of late.

That sort of buying is still going on. One hears frequent mention of unlisted stocks of Chicago and other corporations that are quietly picked up by investors, who run largely to preferred issues paying 7 per cent. in a market where 6 is the top for bank accommodations.

C. B. & Q. DIVIDENDS.

But there is one stock listed these many years, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, that finds friends even at the advanced prices. It is now quoted at 175, which is equivalent to 290 or better previous to the recent stock increase. The New York report that the directors will declare a dividend of 80 per cent. tomorrow is not backed by any local information. The 20 per cent. that was heretofore predicted would do very well.

The oils are comparatively neglected, doubtless because the advance has already been so large. Thus far the stock market, whether in New York or in this city, has lacked the funds or the pluck to go forward on a grand scale, everything moving up, but contents itself with taking a hitch in certain classes, then dropping them and trying something else.

But the reports regarding those oil stocks which are specially favored in this city, continue to be of the most cheering character. Texas Company seems to be close to the time for a showdown on its sulphur mine, though the exact form of conferring benefits on the Texas Company's stockholders has not been decided on. Three or four of the smaller companies are doing remarkably well and will be heard from in higher prices before long, probably.

But some of our local stocks, heretofore performing admirably, are in the penumbra of the last month of the year, which does their complexions no good. Sears, Roebuck & Company, which means business all over the country and which therefore signifies more than most others, has gone farther down, and Wrigley has wriggled to a lower level.

Cheap transportation looks well in the form of the two "yellows" cab and manufacturing, but the stocks have ceased aviating through the clouds.

Through all this experience of the wickedness of getting rich or the unpleasantness of getting poor, whether in the security market or in merchandising, let us keep before ourselves the problem whether the cheapening of money and the advance in the value of sure dividend payers, or more particularly bonds whose interest will unquestionably be handed out for an indefinite period, means the dull and depressed time that it has meant in the past years.

COPPERS FIRM IN BOSTON MARKET

Mexican Investment Strong and Active on Local Exchange; Curb Trading Quiet

The Boston market displayed more strength at the opening than later in the morning. It began with a firm tone and with gains predominating. Selling soon offset demand and the list, while remaining irregular, ruled lower before noon. Trading was active and of fair breadth. Copper Range and West End sold at new 1921 highs, while Maine Central reached a new low for the year to date. Mexican Investment was a strong and active issue. Coppers were firm but not conspicuous. Gains of point or point or more were made by Mexican Investment and West End. Losses of a point or more were sustained by Boston & Maine preferred, Agricultural Chemical preferred and Warren Brothers.

Stocks to advance fractionally during the morning included American Telephone, Copper Range, Island Creek, United Fruit, United Shoe, Ventura, Wickwire, Swift & Co. and Utah Metal. Small recessions were recorded for Boston & Maine, Maine Central, Trinity, Pond Creek, Libby, Waltham Watch, Amoskeag and New England Oil.

CURB TRADING DULL.

It was a dull morning on the Curb and the market had an irregular trend. Leaders were Boston & Montana, Eureka and Mohegan. At the end of the morning Boston & Montana was up 4 cents at 84 cents, Eureka 2 cents at 29 cents, Mohegan 10 cents at 33 cents, Mutual 1 cent at 48 cents and Bay State 4 cents at 10 cents. Among declines were Crystal 1 cent at 39 cents, First National 2 cents at 88 cents, Ruby 1 cent at 29 cents, Verde Mines 1 cent at 20 cents and United Verde Extension ¼ at 28¼.

Boston Financial Notes

Copper Range has more than $5,000,000 in net quick assets and no large amount of unsold metal.

General Manager John D. Pope of the Boston-Montana Corporation wires that the south half of the company's new mill is now producing concentrates regularly and will be in daily shipments of fifty tons immediately. The north or second, half of the mill is now in readiness to produce concentrates which will give a total of one hundred tons of concentrates daily.

Waldorf System, Inc., has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents on the first preferred and on the preferred stocks and regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents on the common, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 20.

It is stated that Superior & Boston will probably resume shipments of copper ore on a moderate scale within a few weeks.

George L. Gilmore of the Middlesex Bleachery & Dye Works and Arnold W. Hunnewell of Amory Browne & Co. have been elected directors of the Webster & Atlas National Bank to fill vacancies.

For the September quarter the Davis-Daly Copper Co. reports gross receipts of $224,413; disbursements $153,443, and net profit $70,970. This compares with net of $85,597 in the three months ended June 30.

Everyman—and the Market
An exchange itself does not buy or sell anything. It is solely a market place for securities.
Why is the subject of exchanges of deep concern to every man?
Exchanges give ten-fold power of service to the dollar, mobility to capital and flexibility to credit.
By attracting and distributing the combined resources of many individuals they enable the railroads to maintain service, the mills to buy raw materials and equipment, the city, the state and the nation to undertake those vast public enterprises which make for the progress of civilization.
For a century, the New York Curb Market has thus served the nation. It owns and occupies a modern exchange building at 78 Trinity Place.
And Jones & Baker, nearly 40% of whose new customers are introduced by old customers, are one of the leading factors in this great market.
They have developed service facilities which make them the natural "information headquarters" for the stocks traded on the New York Curb Market.

INAL OPPORTUNITY TO ENTER TEST IS PASSING

"Tempest and Sunshine" is not the rect Title of any picture in the ton American's $5,000 Book Title ture Test.

Please observe. The title, "Tempest d Sunshine," is unimportant; disgard it; it is NOT the title of a Test rawing. It appeared in one edition he first) on one day recently. It uld not have been there. If you e that list, take "Tempest and shine" out of it. The Correct Title of the day is one of the titles remaining.

One of our friends, at the Army Base in South Boston, inquires whether he may typewrite the titles he selects for the Test Drawings. Others may have had the same question in mind.

Titles may be written with pencil, pen and ink, or typewriter. They may be printed. A method followed by many with satisfactory results is to clip from the List of Titles the one you prefer and paste it on.

If the Test Editor were a contestant he would invest not more than ten or fifteen cents in a note book, paste one picture onto each of sixty pages and write the title (and all the information asked for by the coupon) below it. Newsprint (the kind of paper you hold in your hand) will not hold ink very well. The paper of the note-book WILL hold it. Using a blank-book, moreover, there can be no question about the "neatness" of your parcel. If you follow this plan please do not invest more than ten or fifteen cents in the blank-book. The Book Test should cost you nothing.

Anybody who today reads of the Test for the first time, and who would like to make a beginning, may learn how to do so by writing promptly to the Book Test Editor, Boston American, P. O. Box 239, Boston 8, Mass. Enclose stamped and self-addressed envelope.

ORDER PAPER DAILY.

If between now and next Monday you do not have an ironclad understanding with the newsdealer that the Boston American must be delivered to you regularly, or saved for you every day, you are likely to find yourself short one or more pictures when the Book Test is over. As was explained yesterday, the writer has been "helping out" in this direction from his own daily allowance of papers and from such other allowances as he could break into throughout the building. He has been told to "cut it out," and has been served with orders that after the present week he must obey the spirit as well as the letter of the law.

If, then, you now are shy a picture or two, please report the matter at once. Send stamped and self-addressed envelope. After Test Drawing No. 22 appears it will be impossible to get a Back Picture from this office. They never have been sold here. The practice nowadays is to print only newspapers enough to take care of the trade. The dealer, in his turn, orders only papers enough to supply the known demand. Let YOUR dealer know, today, that you are interested in the Book Test and MUST have the paper every day.

One title in today's list of Titles fits today's picture better than any other title in the list. THAT title is the Correct Title. When you have found it, write it upon the allotted line.

Please remember that "Tempest and Sunshine" is NOT the Correct Title of any Test Drawing and will not be the title of one. That title never should have been in the list the day it appeared. It was discovered with the appearance of the First Edition and removed immediately. The CORRECT Title was among those that remained. No other change was made in the list.

The Test Artist appears to think this a "gift" enterprise. See what he places before us today! Does the man call this one a "problem?" You will write the Correct Title in three shakes of a lamb's tail.

Mind you have that understanding with Mr. Newsdealer before the present week is out.

Each and every picture in the Book Test will represent the TITLE of a book. The contestant is to name the Correct Title. Here we are in December. At the close of the Test, soon after the turn of the New Year, you will send in your sets of 60 Drawings and the Boston American will pay the following awards in cash to those who have sent in the largest numbers of Correct Titles:

One First Award	$1,000
One Second Award	750
One Third Award	500
One Fourth Award	400
One Fifth Award	300

Rules of the Book Title Test

The Boston American Book Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by this newspaper to its readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published one each day for sixty days consecutively (Sundays excepted) in the Boston American.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of sixty pictures, each representing the title of a well-known book, to be printed, one each day, in the Boston American, the first picture on Monday, November 7, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American; or on a page of some book form of itself, accompanied by the picture furnished by the Boston American, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, that is, do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Book Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all pictures in the Test will contain written or printed matter, if mailed it is absolutely necessary that the packages be fully prepaid at postal rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. List of Book Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list appearing will contain among others the correct title.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Book Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies they should enclose stamped and self-addressed envelopes.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Book Title Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

SEES BRITAIN'S RULE IN INDIA SLIPPING

Francis Says Root Seeks at Conference to Create Anglo-American Imperialism

By PHILIP FRANCIS.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The British Library of Information on Whitehall street, New York, which is really a salaried staff of British propagandists, made an awkward mistake the other day.

There is at present in India, on tour with the Prince of Wales a Professor L. F. Rushbrook Williams, whose business it is to prepare propaganda presenting British rule in India in a light that is as fair as it is false. Williams' salary is paid by the British Indian government and his propaganda books are printed by the government printing office at Calcutta.

It so happens that Cuthbert Hicks, in charge of the British propaganda bureau in New York, mailed a copy of one of Professor Williams' propaganda documents to your correspondent, which was intended to be accompanied by a sarcastic note, and at the same time wrote a letter to Professor Williams in India, telling him he had done this, and also revealing some very private propaganda affairs.

PROPAGANDA BY JAPS.

Then Hicks got his letters in the wrong envelopes and your correspondent got the one meant for Professor Williams.

In this letter the person in charge of British propaganda at No. 44 Whitehall street, New York, anxiously inquires of his fellow propagandist in India what Japan is doing by secret propaganda and instigation of other sorts to encourage the boycotts and mutinies in India.

And right there you can lay your finger on one of the principal anxieties which has brought British diplomacy to Washington in search of an Anglo-American alliance of some sort under any old name that sounds sweetest to American ears.

Look at the map and see what Japan can do to British rule in India, and then look at what Japan can do to China and the open door if she once gets a grip, friendly or hostile, on India. She could seize and hold China against the whole white race.

British diplomacy is bent upon a triple alliance wherein it can bore from the inside, and play the balance of power against both of the other parties to the centre, while the American navy slowly decays.

England has chosen to defend her empire in India at Washington by diplomatic cunning rather than on the Pacific and in Asia by arms.

When the old tiger, Clemenceau, returned from India, a few months ago, he told his personal friends that England was sure to lose India as things were going. And the British Foreign Office knows better than Clemenceau the desperate plight of its rule in India.

ROOT'S HAND SEEN.

That Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes should have stepped so blithely into this British trap is not surprising. Neither of them is responsible for this attempt to establish a camouflage entente, or even for this conference of Washington.

The secret hand which pulls the strings for England in America is the hand of Elihu Root.

What Root wants above anything else in the world is to create an Anglo-American imperialism which would dominate the world, and in which his dearly beloved England would be the senior and masterful partner.

One has only to glance at Root to see what an effect the prospect of carrying to success his cherished Anglo-American alliance has had upon him. The man looks ten years younger than he did a while ago, and it is rather an odd coincidence that Balfour should have declared to Geddes, the day Hughes formally opened the conference with the proposal to make a naval entente with England and Japan, that he himself felt ten years younger than he did when he entered the door.

I wonder what better ground for suspicion of this conference and its avowed aims any loyal and true-hearted American needs than that. Both are the children of the brains of Arthur Balfour and Elihu Root.

FR. O'FLANAGAN TALKS AT MANCHESTER, N. H.

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 1. — Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, vice-president of Sinn Fein, spoke before an audience that filled the Strand Theatre to the doors. Father O'Flanagan was met at the depot by a committee from the three councils of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic and escorted to the residence of Right Rev. George Albert Guertin, D. D., whose guest he will be while in Manchester. He was accompanied by his secretary, Thomas O'Connor, and L. J. Madden of Washington, general organizer of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

Let Us Go Forward Bravely and Alone to Our Splendid Destiny

"How often have you heard it said, 'What fools these Germans were to depart from a policy by which they were peacefully conquering the world, and risk and lose all in the hazard of war.'

"Apply those sentiments to ourselves. What fools these Americans are and would be to depart from the policies of Washington, of Jefferson, of Jackson, of Lincoln, of Cleveland; policies of non-entanglement in foreign affairs; policies under which they were peacefully, prosperously, progressively conquering the world, and risk all in foreign conflicts and complications."

PERHAPS no paragraphs in the article signed "Americus," written by William Randolph Hearst as instructions to the editors of his paper, published one week ago Sunday, are more pregnant with the philosophy of good sense than are these striking paragraphs which stand at the head of this editorial.

A little over seven years ago, that Germany which today is so broken, so bankrupt, so helpless against the threats and punishments of foreign dictators, was as prosperous and as powerful as our own America. Contrary to the common belief of the superficial, Germany had won but little of this power and prosperity by the sword.

Attacked without cause and without reason, except the meddlesome and ambitious militarism of Napoleon III., Germany had, it is true, been consolidated into a great confederation by the stress of that war, and had regained the provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, which had been German territory before they were taken from Germany by the conquering arms of Kings of France and later by the great Napoleon.

Shortly previous to that the kingdom of Prussia had also taken the small territory of Schleswig-Holstein from Denmark and Austria.

But, with these two exceptions, the power and prosperity of the German Empire were based not upon conquest, not upon annexations, not upon spoils of war and victory, but upon forty years of peaceful and remarkable industry, production and trade.

The most renowned victories of Germany were victories of peace—manufacturing victories, scientific victories, agricultural victories, commercial victories, and intellectual victories.

A small and naturally infertile country, crowded with a virile population which steadily increased its birth rate, Germany became, under the fostering care and leadership of a government that was wise in everything but falling into the snare of final war, the best employed, the best nurtured, the best housed, the best clothed, the best educated and the most contented people grouped together on the continent of Europe.

The intelligence of her officials and financiers, the genius of her inventors, the activities of her manufacturers, the skill of her workmen and the adventurous courage and capacity of her traders and sailors, made Germany a huge beehive of profitable industry, into which came and from which went forth in steadily increasing abundance the honey of production, trade and riches.

Unhappily for Germany, the geographical position had made her the object of attack and invasion by Russia, by Austria and by France at frequent intervals during more than two hundred years, and there had grown up a militarism which was long purely defensive but which, after the decisive and victorious war with France in 1870, took on more and more the character of a meddlesome and aggressive militarism. This, reacting on the volatile and restless temperament and the excessive pride and vanity of Kaiser Wilhelm, resulted in Germany's persistent and irritating injection of her military might into European diplomatic intrigues and projects until, finally, England and France and Romanoff Russia were able to prepare that pitfall of partially open and partially secret alliance and enormously superior strength in numbers, arms and resources into which the Kaiser and his military chiefs led Germany to her destruction.

Hindsight is as common as foresight is rare, and even a dull mind can now see that had Germany avoided the diplomatic intrigues of the rest of Europe; had she kept her military and naval armaments as strictly defensive preparations; and had she stood fast on her own boundaries to meet the onset of her foes, she would still be the prosperous, powerful and peacefully conquering empire which "Americus" describes her as having been only seven short years ago.

It was the alliance with Austria-Hungary and Italy that ruined Germany, and not the alliance of Russia and France, with the secret support of England, against Germany.

All Europe could not have destroyed Germany had she stood alone and aloof from all European diplomatic intrigues and from all alliances and gone steadily on her way to the goal of peaceful, industrial conquest.

That policy she did not pursue.

That policy was not within the desire or the comprehension of her military and diplomatic chiefs.

Her mighty edifice of riches, power and dominion was founded upon the shifting sands of political and military alliances, and when the storms and tempests of war finally beat upon that wonderful edifice, so founded upon those shifting sands, it fell, and great was the fall thereof.

The world still echoes to the reverberations of that tremendous fall.

The German people still stumble dazed amid the ruins of all that was so splendid, so mighty, so seemingly invincible to the shock of sudden war or to the gnawing tooth of Time.

Countrymen and friends, is not this lesson recent enough and awful enough and impressive enough to warn us not to follow the same path in which proud and strong Germany walked to her doom?

Having ears to hear, shall we be deaf to such a warning?

Having eyes to see, shall we be blind to such an awful spectacle of a great nation sitting amid the ashes of her desolation and ruin?

Well and wisely does "Americus" exclaim:

"What fools these Americans are and would be to depart from the policies of Washington, of Jefferson, of Jackson, of Lincoln, of Cleveland; policies of non-entanglement in foreign affairs, policies under which they were peacefully, prosperously, progressively conquering the world, and risk all in foreign conflicts and complications."

That is the folly which poor, mistaken, shortsighted Mr. Wilson was tricked into by the far cleverer brains with which he so confidently and so disastrously set forth to "match minds" at Paris.

That is the folly whose sinister face peers through all the veils of fine phrases and sentimental platitudes hung around the proceedings of this present conference at Washington.

Countrymen, what other lamp can light our feet safely along the path of the future but the lamp of past history and previous experience?

As Mr. Wilson stumbled and fell into the pitfall prepared for him at Paris hugging his delusion of a League of Nations, which was to bring a millennium of international righteousness, while dictating a Carthagenian peace to defeated enemies, so this administration will stumble and fall into a like pitfall if it continues to hug to its bosom the delusion of an Association of Nations and a millennium of peace on sea and land to be ushered in by our stripping ourselves of our strength and walking defenceless in the company of the land-wolves and the sea-wolves of the world.

Good people, countrymen and friends, Americans all—these words of "Americus" are the words of soberness and of truth.

They are as full of wise warning as they are of genuine patriotism.

They would meet the approval of great Washington and of great Lincoln were either of those heroic figures permitted to return for a time from the places where they sit among the shades of the wise and the mighty who have filled the world with the renown of their wisdom, their deeds and their deathless names.

Americans, the destiny of the republic is to be, in the times of God, the shining and beneficent sun of the world's civilization, a sun of righteousness and of glorious and of peaceful example which shall indeed rise above the horizon of the future with healing in its rays for the woes of mankind.

Our true path is plain before us.

It becomes us to walk in that path alone, not as followers, but as leaders and captains of the forward march of the children of men.

Our America needs no crutches of foreign alliance.

She stands on her own sure feet, beautiful as the feet of the messengers on the mountains that bring glad tidings.

Let us courageously and proudly accept our high destiny.

Let us acquit ourselves like men and women in whose veins flows the blood of heroic fathers and mothers—like the sons and daughters of those strong men and women who found our America in the wilderness and brought her with their sacrifices, their wisdom and their valor to that seat of overtopping might and magnanimous, peaceful power and dominion and renown in the earth where she rightfully sits today.

What other watchword do we need, or do we desire or will we have, countrymen and dear friends, than this:

"AMERICA FIRST, AMERICA LAST AND AMERICA ALONE."

"Shift Your Lymph"

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A London physician has started Britishers on a new idea. "Shift your lymph," he declares, "if you want to become healthy," and urges the adoption of this phrase as a slogan.

"Most people know something about the circulation of the blood," says the doctor. "They realize more or less the difference between arteries and veins and understand the importance of both.

"How many of us know anything about the circulation of lymph in our bodies?

"Yet this lymph is derived from the blood, and its importance to us is enormous. Certainly it is only of late that medical men themselves have begun to understand fully the influence of lymph on local and general bodily welfare. The general public, therefore, may well be excused for ignorance in the matter.

"Lymph permeates every nook and cranny of our bodies. Every part of us, every organ in us, with very few exceptions, is bathed in lymph. From lymph it secures its nourishment; into lymph it passes its waste products. Doctors are finding that by damming up or urging on the lymph of a limb or of an organ remarkable alterations may be effected.

The soft and rounded curves of beauty may be displaced, diminished or exaggerated almost at will. The beauty specialist, without knowing it, works by lymph. To alter shape you need but alter lymph supply. The lymph, contained as it is in delicate vessels, is easily pressed back or hastened in its flow. Only slight pressure is needed to displace it. The pressure of an active muscle may urge it on; the constriction of a slightly tightened belt or collar may dam it back.

"Many a headache has its origin in constriction of lymph vessels at the roots of the neck. The exhilaration of exercise and a bath is largely due to free lymph flow.

"Lymph is our friend or foe in a hundred ways, as we use it well or ill. The watchword of health is, 'Shift your lymph.'"

WIDOWS ARE WONDERFUL

"Darling," said the young man, "do you love me?"

"I-I-I don't know," hesitated the girl.

"Would you like me to ask your mother first?"

"Oh, no. Please don't. She's a widow. I want you myself."

Tax Revision

By Felix Vorenberg

THE Sixty-seventh Congress has adjourned after enacting much legislation, but the two most important problems before the country, the tariff and the tax revision, have not been permanently disposed of.

Although tax revision has become a law, it is safe to predict that the people of the country are altogether dissatisfied and, though we are given to understand that the measure is a temporary one, we feel quite disturbed and are justified in feeling that this matter should have been settled. It seems deplorable that a job which has taken so much time must be done over again because it was not done right at first.

Industry Suffers

Apparently Congress is satisfied that a little improvement is better than none, with the result that American industry is bound to suffer for another year, facing, in the meantime, a depression coming from a peace-time tax bill, produced through a war-time necessity.

A repeal of all so-called nuisance taxes.

A repeal of the excess profit tax.

A repeal of the higher surtax.

These are remedies for which a most patient country has been waiting, and for which remedy the Republican party held out great hopes before the election.

There is a unanimity about these demands which is quite marked, though here and there political reasons are given for not accepting the suggestions made by thinking men and women. Congress should be made to understand that the people are tired of being confronted with arguments about "political expediency," when the road to constructive legislation seems to lead clearly in the opposite direction. The platform upon which the Republican party came into office constitutes a solemn promise to immediately reduce the taxes of the country, and they have been reduced somewhat, but hardly enough to scratch the surface of what might be done, and yet the remedy in the shape of a sales tax would have solved the entire problem.

Business men cannot understand the failure of Congress to adopt such a tax, and not only business men but experts on economics, professional men and the press have indorsed and are still indorsing the simplest of all taxes, "the sales tax."

Mr. William Randolph Hearst, in his powerful articles, has strongly advocated a sales tax. So convinced is he of his case that he has invited members of Congress to travel through Canada for the purpose of studying that form of taxation in operation there, and which, in reality, is nothing more or less than a sales tax.

Can all these people be wrong? Can all the countries where a sales tax is in force today be wrong? Are the business men unable to answer a question which, after all, is a business question? Our government cannot afford to deny itself for any length of time the benefit of a tax which has been successful elsewhere, even though it may not be politically expedient, and when we decide to make the change we will find that a 1 per cent. sales tax—a normal income tax for individuals and for corporations—will furnish the necessary revenue, simple to collect and simple to pay. The greater help to business revival will follow the acceptance of such tax revenues, and the people of this country must and will appreciate the efforts of the government to carry out the pledge upon which the changes in the administration were made last November.

Cannot Please All

No important national movement can be expected to please all of our people, but if the question of having a sales tax, plus a normal income tax, in place of all the past and present taxation, was put before the people of the country to vote upon, what do you think would be the answer?

What do you think would be the answer if the people would give their representatives in Congress some idea of what is in their minds with reference to the revenue act just passed?

The future alone will solve our present economic difficulties, but let us hope that we will not be kept in suspense too long and that the Sixty-eighth Congress of the United States will bring the long expected message of a return of prosperity to patient people who are devoted to their country and its affairs.

Letter to the Editor

Grateful to the Boston American

Editor Boston American:

Three weeks ago, almost discouraged with the result of the findings of the rating board at the Veterans Bureau, I went to Mr. Power, a member of your staff, and told about my case. I had been gassed and wounded in the battle of St. Mihiel on date of September 12, 1918, and had just finished a ten months period of hospital treatment and was discharged October 24, 1921. After my hospital discharge I was unable to return to my former occupation on account of my disability.

I applied for rehabilitation and my claim was refused by the rating section, composed of a group of doctors, who decide on the policy to pursue in such matters. This rating board is part of the Veterans Bureau.

After hearing the facts of my case Mr. Power very kindly assisted me in putting the matter of my vocational handicap in its true light before the board. The result was that a course of training has been approved by those officials for me. I will never be able to repay Mr. Power for the great service he so kindly rendered me.

I am only one of hundreds of former A. E. F. boys Mr. Power has helped. If you will extend to him my deepest appreciation for his great kindness I will be obliged to you.

The policy which you have followed in aiding the disabled veteran is most commendable. Your action in helping us boys, through the medium of your paper, stands unparalleled by any other Boston newspaper. The others have almost forgotten us. You still continue to aid the boys with their just and legal claims. The ex-American army will never forget that newspaper called the Boston American.

DISCORDANT SOULS AND TUNING THEM UP

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

OUT of the depths of his elevator well, Dominick Toye sends a letter to the writer, which we wish that we might here reproduce verbatim to tell its own story.

However, an "expurgated" edition may be fit for the reader's eyes and may be sufficiently helpful to justify its printing. Here, then as the reporter would put it, is what Mr. Toye "said in part":

"Your splendid, healthy conceptions, without theological daubery, are so intensely refreshing and helpful to me that I simply obeyed that impulse and wish to express my sincere appreciation. I have had such thoughts so very often, and yet how hollow, mirthless and barren of fulfillment my life has been!

"What pervert 'teaching' and preachment has done to me, I fear will take years of patient effort to eradicate, and I am thirty-four and an elevaor man—and how I hate that job, partner!

"'Be a spiritual Michael Angelo, and carve out the beautiful statue that is hidden within you!' That is a heaven-inspiring message, Doctor.

Discouraged Wretch

"You fire me, a discouraged wretch, with renewed desire and effort to do better, and that's what I have been straining my ears for—for it seems so many tiresome years!

"You have tuned up, I am sure, many a discordant soul to the touch of the Divine Master, so that I just wish to thank you for your splendid stimulative thoughts! . ."

No one, who is not privileged to pursue a similar calling as teacher, whether with the spoken or the written word, can know what it means to receive such assurance that your heart's beat has won responsive rhythm; that your friendly arrow has struck the mark at which it aimed; that your spirit's overflow has brought balm to another soul.

Why Dominick Toye has been a discouraged wretch, or why at thirty-four a man of such good education and such shining sentiments is only an elevator man, and why he hates ,that job, we shall discuss another time.

What is splendid in his letter and inspiring to all of us is his fine, though suggestive, phrase about tuning up a discordant soul to the touch of the Divine Master.

Herein the teacher is taught! And Dominick Toye, the pupil (the constant and devoted reader, as he calls himself), becomes the instructor!

Which is as it should be in a democratic society, wherein we are all essential equals and all are mutually helpful.

Tuning up our discordant souls! That is the personal task of each of us, elevator man and professional uplifter alike!

After all, what does it matter, essentially, whether you are clergyman or congregation, capitalist or laborer, elevated or elevator—all social service ranks the same with God, and we are all under the same personal necessity to tune up our discordant souls to the touch of the Divine Master.

That is an aristocracy which human nature imposes upon us, and no one can escape the blessed burden!

Call yourself what you will, have whatever religious affiliations you choose (or accept what has been chosen for you), or though you may be without such associations—you are bound to seek to be in harmony with God.

Though you may be rich or poor, learned or ignorant, herein neither wealth nor wisdom avails—we are all alike, and democratically obliged by the law of our being to try to establish harmonious relations with the universe.

More Modern Speech

You may not care to use that language. You may prefer to use more modern speech. Hebrew, Latin, American—these are only outward sounds and traditions.

The soul's language is universal. The spirit's need everywhere and under whatever conditions is the same. Our discordant souls simply must become attuned to the world-soul!

Just that is the meaning and the beauty of being human. Namely, that we are aware of relationship with more-than-ou selves, and that our high self-respect fairly compels us to yearn to be in harmony therewith.

That is at once the sublimely aristocratic fact about our human nature, and the magnificent meaning of our democracy.

Thus is our highest calling commonplace, and the lowliest one is dignified by a glory in his bosom that transfigures him.

We thank you for your stimulating thought, dear Dominick!

Did you know that your very name means "belonging to the Lord"?

As do we all of us—belong to the Lord and to one another!

Not a Gambling Proposition

Few people seem to be bothering themselves over the question whether there is or is not a future life. The reason probably is that there's no chance to cash in on bets that might be made on it.
